JUSTICE KNOWLTON RESIGNS

Chief Justice Marcus P. Knowlton of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts resigned from the bench to-day. A recent affliction of the eyes led to his retirement.

Governor Foss received the following letter from Chief Justice Knowlton:

Dear Sir: On account of an affection of my eyes, which has come upon me lately, and which gravely interferes with the performance of my public duties, I herewith resign the office of Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, this resignation being sent under the Revised Laws, Chapter 168, Section 10, to take effect on Sept. 7, 1911.

Very respectfully yours,
MARCUS P. KNOWLTON.

Regrets Loss to State.

Dudley M. Holman, secretary of the Governor, who gave out the letter of Justice Knowlton, added:

"The Governor, under the circumstances, of course will accept the resignation of the chief justice, and will so inform him during the day, although he regrets that Massachusetts is to lose the services of so eminent a jurist and a man whom the entire Commonwealth has the deepest regard for and the truest confidence in.

"The Chief Justice retires under Section ten of Chapter 159 Revised Laws, which provides that a justice of either court who, having attained the age of seventy years and having served in either or both of said courts for at least ten consecutive years, resigns his office shall, during the remainder of his life, receive an amount equal to three-fourths of the salary which is by law payable to him at the time of his resignation, to be paid by the Commonwealth in the same manner as the salaries of justices if said courts are paid."

Chief Justice Knowlton's eyes began to trouble him in May. The ailment came on him suddenly. He was at the Parker House in Boston, and there he was treated by a specialist. The trouble was such that he was rendered unable to read or write.

The Chief Justice, however, still continued to perform the duties of his office, by consulting with and receiving the assistance of other Justices of the Supreme Court. It was thought that the trouble could be cured, and that he would not be forced to give up his work.

Is a Graduate of Yale.

Justice Knowlton is past seventy-two years of age. He was born in Williamham this State. He lived on a farm until he was seventeen, studied at the public schools, attended the Mosson Academy, taught school and graduated from Yale.

Justice Knowlton studied law in Palmer and Springfield, and was admitted to the bar in 1862 in Springfield where he opened an office. He lives in Springfield, but is at present stopping at the Belgrade Hotel, at the Belgrade Lakes in Maine.

Though Justice Knowlton has always been devoted to his profession, he has found time to serve the public in other capacities. He has been president of the Common council at Springfield, is a director in the City National Bank there, and was a director of the Springfield & New London Railroad Company.

He served in the State House of Representatives in 1878 and in the Senate two years later. In 1881 he was appointed a justice of the Superior Court and six years later was promoted to the Supreme Judicial Court. His wife is dead.

It was generally politically circles that Chief Justice John Adams Aiken of the Supreme Court would be appointed to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Chief Justice Knowlton, and that Justice Charles A. De Courcey, of the Superior Court, would be advanced to fill Chief Justice Aiken's place. Both Aiken and De Courcey are Democrats.

NEW POLICEMEN SWORN IN TO-DAY

The men appointed to the police force as reserve officers by Police Commissioner O'Meara recently were sworn into office by Captain Thomas Ryan to-day. The new policemen are Ferdinand E. Breed of No. 40 Saxton street, Roxbury; Edmund W. Buckley of No. 17 Mount Vernon street, Charlestown; Thomas J. Cullen of No. 886 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown; Cornelius Crowley, No. 28 Tufts street, Charlestown; Walter L. Donahoe of No. 107 Westmin street, Dorchester; Stephen J. Dunleavy of No. 326 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown; Daniel J. Keohoe of No. 5 Estey street, Roxbury; Timothy M. Kelleher of No. 19 Allen street, West End; John R. King of No. 44 Chamber street, Brighton; Daniel W. Lynch of No. 9A Hollis street Charlestown; Gustav A. Schulz of No. 53 Houghton street, Dorchester, and Timothy J. Sheehan of No. 125 Pleasant street, Dorchester.

1,563 LAND IN HUNGER FROM SHIP

The Provincetown excursion steamer Dorothy Bradford docked at 10:45 o'clock to-day after one of the most exciting trips ever recorded along the Boston water front. Everyone of her 1563 hungry and sleepless passengers were joyfully greeted by their friends, who had been waiting for them on the dock since early morning. The steamer was just sixteen hours overdue.

The steamer was sighted by the crowd at 10:25 coming slowly through the fog. She had anchored last night off Boston Light, and early to-day steamed slowly as far as Spectacle Island, when she was forced to anchor again for nearly half an hour until the fog lifted a little. This was the last halt made and the steamer came up the harbor without mishap, a-blowing her whistle.

As the vessel was docking, the passengers on board began to shout to the crowd:

Called for Sandwiches.

"Give us something to eat! Oh, you ham sandwiches!"

Some began to sing: "How starved we a——" and others waved their hats and handkerchiefs at the crowd.

Just before the vessel docked everybody on board gave three cheers for Captain Charles Olsen.

The passengers made a rush for something to eat as soon as they landed and all of the Atlantic avenue restaurants were soon filled with more guests than they could accommodate. All of the passengers were loud in their praises of the conduct of Captain Olsen and his crew.

The women and children, as many as could be accommodated, were given the forty-four staterooms in which to spend the night. The rest of the people lay about on the floor of the saloon and in camp chairs. There was little excitement over food last night, as all of the passengers had eaten at Provincetown, but early to-day everyone began to get hungry. Coffee and rolls and a hard boiled egg each were given to the woman passengers for breakfast as long as the supply lasted.

Candy Stand Sells Out.

The fruit and confectionery stand on the steamer sold out everything last night, but after the rolls and eggs gave out today one man was able to purchase a bun and a piece of chocolate for breakfast. There were scores of others who had little or nothing to eat since they left Provincetown.

Despite their experiences, everyone seemed in happy spirits. One going to bed and there were songs and speeches and a debate on woman's suffrage, and many other amusements. The orchestra played everything in its repertoire over and over again, and the musicians were as weary and as hungry as the rest.

Captain Olsen said:

"We did not receive a complaint from one of our 1,500 odd passengers. At no time were we in danger."

For full details of the experiences of passengers on board the steamer Dorothy Bradford, see page 2.

BOSTON GIRL IS ROBBED ON LINER

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Miss Madeline Traverse, a Boston girl, arrived here today on board the steamer America from Hamburg and reported the robbery from her stateroom of $400 in cash. The robbery was discovered while two days out from Hamburg. Miss Traverse had the money and about $10,000 worth of jewels locked in a safe case. On going to her room she discovered the safe case inside, but the money and the jewels were not touched. She was not here by friends who provided her with funds.

TOGO SPENDS DAY AT NAVAL ACADEMY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Admiral Togo, accompanied by Assistant Secretary Chandler Hale, Captain M. Potts, U. S. N., and the admiral's personal staff, left here to-day in a special car for Annapolis, where the latter is spending the day visiting the United States naval academy. Admiral Togo will return from Annapolis late this afternoon and will dine to-night with Secretary of State Knox, later holding a reception at the National Press Club.

TAFT TO HAVE VETO MESSAGES READY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Taft is already engaged in preparing his veto measures for the wool and cotton bills. He is certain that the measures will pass, and he wants to be ready with the vetoes when they reach him. He will not hold these acts on his desk long, but will rush them back to the House and Senate with his message. He probably will return the measures within twenty-four hours after receiving them.

FEAR HIS HOLINESS DYING; SISTERS RUSH TO BEDSIDE

Forced to Give Up Plans for Celebration.

ROME, Aug. 7.—Pope Pius X., the venerable head of the Catholic Church, is dangerously ill. It is feared that he cannot recover.

For twenty-four hours the Pope has been growing weaker, and in spite of the efforts of physicians and the helpful cheer of his sisters he did not seem any better late to-day.

THOUGHT FOR A TIME HE WAS DYING.

He has been subject to severe fainting spells and to-day was attacked by one to-day. It was the most alarming of any that he has had. It was thought for a time that the Pope was dying.

The news of the precarious condition of the Pontiff soon spread through the Vatican and reached the street. It had been known that the Pope was ill and because of his extreme age—he is seventy-eight—fears were felt throughout Rome that his end was near.

Cardinal Merry Del Val, papal secretary of state, was summoned. He hurried to the bedside of the aged pontiff. He realized that the situation was grave and asked for additional medical help.

Restoratives Administered.

Restoratives were administered. Pellets of oxygen were used as it has been used before this. The doctors were able to revive the sinking man.

But he was told that it was realized that only the greatest care would serve to preserve life.

The Pope's sisters, who have fussed for his life at some time and who were now in the Vatican waiting the progress of his illness, were called.

They have always had a helpful influence on the Pope's current ran so low that it was hardly perceptible. They soothed and cheered him. Their womanly administrations had a perceptibly beneficial influence.

The physicians in attendance, Drs. Fedrizzi and Marchiafava, ordered the Pope to take a complete rest. They have been trying for months, even years, to induce him to cease off on the labor that he persists in doing in connection with his sacred office.

The Pope smiled at the doctors feebly as he was in the exhausted condition of the moment work was impossible. But he promised.

Well, he had never rested and the probabilities were that he would not until he was asked to his long rest.

His Sisters Understood.

The Pope did not say all this, but he indicated it by his manner. The doctors understood it. His sisters, who have been so faithful in their attendance upon him and who have been so solicitous for his bodily health, understood it.

From all over the world messages arrived at Rome to-day asking about the Pope's health. The Eternal City, whose ancient grandeur is only reflected by its massive ruins, was stirred to-day, while the dark shadow of the Death Angel's wings brushed the spires of the towering churches.

The physicians in attendance have had several consultations. It is apparent that they are very anxious over the Popes condition. The fact that no official statement was given out to-day increased the storm of those who feared the Pope was much worse.

The last night the Pope was determined to participate in the celebration of the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birth. It had been planned that the pontiff should wear only the ordinary mitre and a light vestment instead of the triple crown and papal cassock and other finery that he might be oppressed.

Finally the doctors decided that in view of the increasing high temperature that they would oppose the participation of the Pope in the function. Accordingly it was agreed that the ceremony should be conducted by Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary of state.

Reports of the ill-health of Pope Pius came to the world a few days ago in dispatches. These reports were followed by denials, but the fact remained that physicians were called with ever-increasing frequency and that the Pope's audiences were hindered, clergy and pilgrims were suspended. He is in his seventy-ninth year.

PLAISTED AIDS GRAND TRUNK

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 7.—Governor Plaisted, at a conference to-day with John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, and Charles J. Judkins, treasurer of the exchange, expressed his hearty approval of the AMERICAN'S plan to bring the Grand Trunk Railroad to Boston. Governor Plaisted said:

"I am heartily in favor of having the Grand Trunk pass through our cities in Boston as such a railroad system will greatly benefit every States in New England. I am also especially pleased to the Boston Harbor bill. I believe that the improvement of Boston Harbor will greatly benefit all of New England.

"Governor Foss of Massachusetts is to be congratulated on getting the harbor bill through the Legislature. I am strongly in favor of enlarging the port of the Tunnels, has identified as his father's revolver the weapon found near the spot where his mother was shot.

FAMILY PENNILESS AFTER ACCIDENT

James Riley, a Boston & Albany employe, was killed when a locomotive backed down on a track where he and several other men were working, and his wife and five children, who live at No. 39 Morell street, Roxbury, are left destitute. The eldest child is thirteen and the only one who is old enough to appreciate the tragedy. A subscription fund is circulating. A committee of the St. Patrick's T. A. and B. Society has investigated the case, and its members informed Mrs. Riley as a woman worthy of assistance. All the immediate sources of the family were wiped out in paying the funeral expenses of the husband and father.

BORAH SPEEKS FOR THE STATEHOOD BILL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Senator Borah of Idaho, one of the foremost champions of the bill giving statehood to Arizona and New Mexico, delivered a powerful plea in the Senate this afternoon that the two territories be admitted to the sisterhood of States. Borah, however, firmly opposed the recall of judges provision in the Arizona constitution.

HELD ON CHARGE HE SHOT WIFE

Mrs. Theresa Tarsen of No. 68 Tremont street, Melrose, was found with a bullet wound in her left leg in the Fells district of Melrose by Patrolman William J. McCarthy, and to-day Patrick Tarsen, her husband, was held in $1,000 on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon by Judge Bruce in the Malden District Court for a hearing two weeks later, when it is believed his wife will be able to testify.

When the woman was taken to a hospital she was hysterical and unable to tell a connected story. Tarsen says a robber was lying in wait for him when he came along with his wife last night, and that the bullet which struck her was aimed at him. Tarsen says his gun fired at him while lying hidden in the grass. The surgeon who examined Mrs. Tarsen found that the bullet's course was upward.

William, the nine-year-old son of the Tarsens, has identified as his father's revolver the weapon found near the spot where his mother was shot.

ADMITS WRITING ANTI-WILEY LAW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—That he wrote the law which robbed Dr. Harvey W. Wiley of the privilege of recommending prosecutions of dairymilkers before the Department of Agriculture before the House committee investigating the Wiley muckraversy, McCabe said: "I drafted the language that went into the appropriation act of 1911." "And you also drafted general order 140, giving you the sole power to recommend prosecutions, and taking this power away from Dr. Wiley, did you not?" asked Mr. Davis. "I did," replied McCabe.

BOSTON'S POSTAL BANK GETS $4,771

For the first five days, ending Saturday afternoon last, the postal savings bank of Boston received deposits of $14,474. The amount deposited on Saturday was $4,771, nearly double that of any preceding day. The next heaviest was August 3, when it was $2,664. The number of accounts opened for these five days was 821.

MAYOR LONELY, LETTER-LESS!

Mayor Fitzgerald, now sojourning in Europe with members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, according to a communication from him that reached City Hall to-day, has put "Silent Adeline" into the discard and is singing sadly that old time tear-teaser, "The Letter That Never Came."

The complaint of the Mayor is that nobody writes to him. The short ewes Suaver his letters, picture postal cards and cuties.

"For heaven's sake," sailed the Mayor in a communication to Colonel Dick Field, "has everybody in Boston been attacked with writer's cramp since I left? Have I've only got five letters and a cable on two since I left. What's up?"

Colonel Field got a typewriter busy and will try to overtake the Mayor with a letter, telling him what's going on in this city. He has also suggested that he and others and in the course of a week or so, it is expected that the Mayor will be being voluminously from home.

More than 100 picture postal cards reached Boston to-day from the Mayor. This was the thing lunch that has come from the distinguished traveler, and in all he has sent back over 500 such souvenirs to his friends.

SCHOONER SUNK BY THE CAMDEN

ROCKLAND, Me., Aug. 7.—While riding at anchor in the lower harbor to-day the two-masted schooner Eleanor Boynton of Calais, Me., was struck and sunk by the passenger steamer Camden, bound from Boston and Rockland for Bangor.

The schooner's crew of five men escaped in one of their boats. The Camden was not damaged to any extent and proceeded to Bangor.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS GET $25 AND ESCAPE

CHEPACHET, R. I., Aug. 7.—The postoffice safe in the general store of Brown & Hopkins was blown open and rifled early to-day by daring crackers, who escaped in an automobile, taking along about $25 in stamps and a quantity of merchandise and provisions.

COMMITS SUICIDE BY LYING ON TRACK

FITCHBURG, Aug. 7.—James P. Duffy committed suicide to-day by lying on the railroad track at the Breed street crossing and letting a locomotive pass over him. A year ago Duffy fell from a staging and broke both ankles. Since then he has been unable to work and has lived at the town farm. The engineer saw him too late to stop the train.

DEMAND FOSS GIVE PROOFS

The remarkable interview printed exclusively in yesterday's Sunday AMERICAN with Governor Foss, in which he said among other startling things that a lot of the State's money had been stolen right under the noses of those who were appointed to safeguard it for the best interests of the State, has stirred political and business circles more than any other interview that was ever printed in this State.

Rushing to the defense of the party, the Democratic Governor Louis A. Frothingham, in a statement made to-day, says directly to Governor Foss:

"Better or make good at once."

Representative Wilfred White, another aspirant for the shoes of Governor Foss, says:

"I defy him to back up his own words."

The Governor was busy to-day answering telephone calls and distributing copies of his statements to the Democratic Advisory Committee and advising him to continue the case sort of a campaign for re-election. Democratic leaders look upon the interview as the most unfortunate thing that could happen to the Democratic party in this State, coming as it does on the eve of the campaign.

"Don't worry," was the Governor's answer to many of his telephone callers. "Just keep 'em going."

Frothingham Makes Demand.

This direct clash between Governor Foss and the leading Republican candidates for gubernatorial nomination insures a campaign that will bristle with excitement. This is what Lieutenant Governor Frothingham had to say to Governor Foss:

"You are quoted as saying there is not the slightest doubt in your mind that a large part of the state's money has been and is being wasted that should not necessarily by the men who are employed to look out for the State's interests, but under their noses.

"As a citizen of Massachusetts and Lieutenant Governor of the State I call on you to correct or make good, and at once. You owe it to the dignity of the office you hold to prove yourself a man and to every citizen of the State of Massachusetts.

Representative Norman H. White of Brookline this afternoon issued a statement in which he takes up the Governor's statements categorically, and upbraids him for them. The statements says:

"In a Sunday interview in Sunday's AMERICAN Governor Foss made an attempt to fool the people. How much money will the people of the State stand for this political buccaneer's mind statements?

White Criticises Foss.

He declares that if he had not been elected last fall the State would soon be in the ashes of a great conflagration. His experts have failed to discover any evidence of dishonesty or of a wilful of graft.

He declares that this year he has been sweeping the middle of the floor and that next year he is going into the corners. He is certainly welcome to go into all of the corners, but his statement that he has swept the middle of the floor is a joke. He has been too busy reading stock market bulletins delivered to him hourly in the executive chamber and signing messages and speaking at dinners and advertising managers and making promises to suggestions which he has afterwards failed to fulfill to make any investigations of any kind whatsoever.

He says the Railroad Commission is a joke. But perhaps he was speaking of what will be the commission after his former Democratic manager, Fred MacLeod, takes office as its chairman.

ALBANIAN REVOLT SITUATION WORSE

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 7.—Letters received here from Ianina places the situation in Southern Albania as growing worse daily. There have been large concentrations of insurgents near Avlona and in Sopot, in the Prosimeri district.

After being out all night in the fog, passing the time with vaudeville and meal tickets, the hungry passengers from Provincetown were glad to see Atlantic avenue again, and waved their arms in joy.

BOSTON HARBOR IS FOG-BOUND

Boston harbor was fog-bound to-day, the dense mist which shut in yesterday afternoon continuing through the day. Vessels which waited outside the harbor overnight came cautiously into port to-day. Fog horns tooted throughout the day, ferry boats creeping their way across the harbor.

The Massachusetts, the New York outside line steamer, had not arrived during the forenoon and no word had been heard from her. She was due at 8:30 a. m. There was a great crowd at her dock to meet friends. There are nearly 300 passengers on board.

The Bay State from Portland, with 500 passengers on board, docked at 7 o'clock over an hour late.

A large crowd waited at the Provincetown boat dock for friends who spent the night on board the steamer Dorothy Bradford. She was due at 6:30 o'clock last night.

The Belfast, from Bangor, docked at 8 a. m., three hours late. The City of Macon, from Savannah, due to-day, was reported as anchored outside the harbor, waiting for the fog to clear up.

Of the transatlantic liners the Leyland liner Bohemian, from Liverpool, and the Red Star Manitou, from Antwerp, both due to-day, will arrive to-morrow.

The White Star liner Canopic from Italy, with ninety-six first cabin and 1,200 steerage passengers due to-day was heard from by wireless fighting the fog 200 miles out of Boston, and will arrive to-morrow.

The wires were down to-day to the observing stations at Chatham and Highland Light, and no word could be received of either overdue steamers. The United Fruit Company was able to receive word that the Limon from Port Antonio, Jamaica, due to-day, had anchored outside.

Few vessels left port to-day. The Governor Cobb and the Cabin Austin, both for St. John, left shortly after 9 o'clock with passenger lists of 500 vacation seekers each.

The fog extends on the Atlantic coast from Newfoundland to Chesapeake Bay. It is one of the heaviest fogs of the year. No collisions on the New England coast have so far been recorded.

POLICEMAN CUT BY BROKEN BOTTLE

As the result of an endeavor to help make Boston a spotless town, Patrolman John R. Brett of the Back Bay station had the fingers and wrist of his left hand badly cut yesterday. While making his rounds he saw a broken bottle on the steps of No. 7 Norway street. He picked it up to throw it in an ash barrel, when its edge caught in the sleeve of his coat. In trying to release it it cut his hand. He was treated at the City Hospital.

NOTED ARCHITECT OF CAMBRIDGE DEAD

William E. Chamberlain, a prominent Cambridge architect and a designer of many of the beautiful buildings in that city is dead at the home of his brother-in-law, George W. Aldus, at West Manchester. He was fifty-five years old and is survived by a widow, a brother and sister. The funeral services will be held at the Mount Auburn Chapel to-morrow.

TELL OF LONG HOURS IN FOG

When the Provincetown steamer Dorothy Bradford docked at 10:45 o'clock, just six hours overdue, the 1,500 passengers laughed, and sang and cheered. Most of them had not slept during the night. Every one was hungry. Some had had nothing to eat since dinner at Provincetown yesterday afternoon. The steamer was due back in Boston at 7 o'clock last night, but why it was held up was told by Captain Charles Olsen of the steamer. Here is his own story of the trip:

"We left Provincetown at 3 o'clock. Just outside Provincetown Harbor we ran into a thick fog which came in from the East. It blew thicker and thicker, as we went along, and the engines had to be kept at a slow speed. We kept going until we got just inside of Boston Light in the Narrows. We reached there at 7 o'clock, which was the time we were due in Boston.

"The risk of running into ships in the harbor was very great, so we cast anchor there and waited for the fog to lift. We told the passengers that we were being held up there on account of the fog, and the state rooms were thrown open and placed at the disposal of the women and children for them to sleep in.

"There were 1,500 people on board. We did not receive a complaint from any one of them. Instead we received a deal of praise for our forethought in not taking unnecessary risk.

"A good many of the passengers went to sleep. Others remained awake, as we had been delayed and came into port as soon as the fog lifted.

Passengers Have Mock Trial.

"At 3:35 the fog began to lift and we pulled up our anchor. No sooner were we ready to proceed than the fog settled upon us again. To see more than ten feet ahead of the bow of the boat was impossible. We had our wireless working. At 8 o'clock the fog lifted sufficiently so that we could raise anchor and safely enter the harbor. We arrived at 10:45 o'clock. At no time were we in any danger."

The passengers all told of lack of food and of spending the night on the floor, sitting in chairs and camp stools. There was singing and speeches and a mock trial and a debate on woman's suffrage and all sorts of games and entertainments devised to pass away the hours. The passengers could hear fog horns all night. Boston Light could be seen.

Mrs. Margaret Hughson of No. 10 Pearce avenue, Dorchester, said:

"I did not seem to mind the staying out all night, but I did mind not getting any. When I went to buy something there was nothing to buy. Some of the women received coffee, eggs and buns, but I received nothing at all. I was thoroughly tired out after the night as I could not sleep. Although I took anything good naturedly, nevertheless I was very hungry.

"I tried to sleep on the floor, but it was so crowded that you couldn't even rest comfortably, let alone sleep."

Had Vaudeville Show.

Miss Helen Ryan of No. 41 Marion street, Somerville, said:

"We struck the fog right after we left Provincetown, and after we got outside of Boston Light the captain thought it best to anchor. We had a few packages of pop corn and some candy with us, and ate the whole night, and this morning they gave out coffee, a hard-boiled egg and a biscuit to the women. The boat men were out of luck, and they had to starve. We tried to sleep on a camp stool, but couldn't; then we got a settee, and placing a life preserver as a pillow we laid down, but that was no good, and we had to give up all thought of sleep. But there was some fun there. We had plenty of music and a great deal of volunteer vaudeville talent."

Charles Brown of Exeter, N. H., said:

"It was alright only there was no sleep or food. The food only ran out early in the evening and after 10 o'clock nothing could be bought. I attempted to go to sleep in the saloon, but there were about 500 people parked in there and I had to give that up. Then I tried to sleep on a camp stool, but couldn't; then we got a settee, and placing a life preserver as a pillow we laid down, but that was no good, and we had to give up all thoughts of sleep. But there was some fun there. We had plenty of music and a great deal of volunteer vaudeville talent."

Miss Annie Morrill of Brighton, said:

"I went to buy some candy and coffee at 10 o'clock last night and the supply was exhausted. All we had to eat all night was two biscuits. This morning some food was passed out, but we didn't get any. We managed to enjoy the best we could on examstools."

Plenty of Music.

Arthur O'Donnell of Hartford, Ct., said:

"When we arrived we were an hour late. Immediately I went to a hotel and ordered dinner, and by the time I got it it was so hot I had to leave it behind in order to catch the boat back. It was very foggy when we got outside Provincetown, and then after a short while we anchored. Nearly in the evening I bought some food and about 10 o'clock I went after some, but could get none. There was none left.

"We slept along the aisles, and there was one place where a lot of sweethearts were seated and the crowd christened it 'Lovers' Lane.' There was plenty of music and singing. On our side of the boat we had a debate on the question of woman suffrage, and it was decided that women have not the right to vote. We also had a mock trial. Although we were hungry, we passed a night of fun."

BALFOUR MOVES A VOTE OF CENSURE

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Former Premier Balfour, leader of the opposition, to-day moved in the House of Commons a vote of censure for the Government because of its threat to have sufficient new Liberal Peers created to pass the veto bill in the House of Peers. In support of his motion Mr. Balfour said:

"The Government have grossly abused their rights as advisors to the crown. They have placed themselves above the constitution and acted without a precedent. The Government should have been careful not to drag King George into a position, in which, through no fault of his own, the royal prerogative has been abused."

LIFE-SAVERS' TRIP VAIN.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 7.—The Point Judith Life Saving crew, which responded to a call from a vessel supposed to be aground at Green Hill, reported after their row of ten miles that a launch from New York had struck on Rocky Point Bar. She was freed before the lifesavers reached her.

It Was Only a Blind

ANNE LINDSAY BRIDE TO-DAY

One of the most fashionable weddings of the Summer took place to-day at Trinity Church, York Beach, Me., when Miss Anne B. Lindsay became the wife of J. A. Lowell Blake. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John S. Lindsay of Marlboro street, Boston, and of the late Rev. John S. Lindsay, D. D., for years rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The groom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Batz Blake, has a home on Beacon street. Mrs. Blake's brother is Thomas F. Lindsay of Southboro, who married Miss Florence Field, a daughter of Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, and her sister is Mrs. William Endicott Dexter. Miss Anne Lyman was maid of honor. The best man was Barret Wendell, Jr. The ushers were Ronald T. Lyman, W. Hall Hinckley, Alfred G. Nickerson, Harris Livermore, Edward Motley, Lothrop Motley, Channing Frothingham, Jr., and W. Marriott Welch of Boston, W. Graham Rowland of Baltimore and John A. Dix of New York.

Mr. Blake was married in France in 1908 to Miss Helene Prince. She died in Boston almost two years ago.

DEALERS APPEAL MILK CASE FINES

Six Boston milk dealers were in the Dorchester District Court to-day on a charge of selling milk below the standard. The charges were brought by Inspector of Milk James O. Jordan, who took samples during the recent hot weather. Judge Sullivan found three dealers guilty and continued the cases of the others. The Grenolin Company was fined $40 and appealed. The Boston Dairy Company and A. H. Wood Company were fined $15 each and also appealed. The cases of the Elm Farm Milk Company, James F. Lincoln and Allen Brothers were continued.

NO CRIMINALITY IN THE MILK SITUATION

Two of District Attorney Pelletier's assistants have investigated the milk situation in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont at the request of the City Council to have the Grand Jury look into the advance in price by contractors, and the officials he sent to interview farmers in those States have reported that no action for criminality is justified. When Mr. Pelletier gets back to his office this week he will find this report awaiting his signature.

RECIPROCITY WAR IS ON IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—Canada's great political fight was precipitated to-day. Everything points to an electoral struggle the like of which Canada has not seen since 1891. Active campaigning so far as the leaders are concerned, will be confined largely to the country east of Lake Superior. It is felt that the Northwest has already been covered, and local electioneering will attend to that district and to British Columbia.

DORCHESTER MAN INJURED BY FALL

David Currier, seventy-six years old and living at No. 13 Rill street, Dorchester, is in the City Hospital on the dangerous list as a result of falling from the roof of a house at No. 1 Rill street early to-day. He was repairing the roof and accidentally walked off the edge.

TRUSTY BREAKS JAIL IN SALEM

Sylvester LeBaron, who was serving six months in the Salem jail for drunkenness, escaped during the night by raising a window in the double cell in the hospital where he was confined and dropping into the Howard street cemetery, after he had sawed through bars. LeBaron was a trusty and being a marine engineer by trade, had been employed in the jail boiler room. It is thought that he was enabled to procure a saw to cut the bars and a rope with which to reach the ground. His wife has supported herself and four children by washing since LeBaron has been in jail. The family live in a small tenement on Endicott street, Salem. As the fugitive was a prison suit, it is believed some friend had a suit of citizens' apparel for him in the cemetery.

Jail officials think LeBaron shammed illness to get into the hospital and will start an investigation.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. Wm. J. Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. D. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

$1,000 REWARD FOR SLAYER

Attorney-General Greenough of Rhode Island conferred with Governor Pothier today relative to offering a reward in connection with the mysterious death of Mrs Lilly C. Nickerson of Jamaica Plain, who, it is believed, was the victim of murder on the Joy line steamer Georgia, going from Providence to New York on the night of July 20.

A reward will not be offered until the conclusion of the inquest, which will be resumed on Wednesday in Little Compton, R. I., when it is expected that the State will offer $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the woman's death.

"The case is so surrounded by mystery," said Attorney-General Greenough today, "that I believe the offering of a reward would go a long way toward clearing it up.

Some One Has Solution.

"Some one probably knows who was responsible for Mrs. Nickerson's death. A reward may be the means of inducing the person to turn the information over to the authorities.

"If the coroner's inquest finds that Mrs. Nickerson was the victim of foul play, I shall immediately request Governor Pothier to offer $1,000 reward for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the guilty person.

"The Governor has informed me that he stands ready to co-operate with me in every way and I have no doubt that he will offer a reward in the name of the State if I ask him to do so."

Following the official statement by Coroner Lincoln that Mrs. Nickerson was not the victim of drowning the public reached the same conclusion as the woman's husband, Raymond C. Nickerson of New York, and other of her relatives, that she was murdered, and was not the victim of suicide or an accident.

Deputy sheriffs served summonses this morning on Captain Isaiah Kelley, Purser Robert Hamilton and other officers and members of the crew of the Joy line steamer Georgia, on which Mrs. Nickerson met her tragic death the night of July 20. It is expected now light will be shed when their stories are heard at the coroner's inquest at Little Compton, R. I., next Wednesday.

Suspect Boston Man.

The fact that Mrs. Nickerson had no intimate friends in Providence, as far as known, leads the Rhode Island authorities to believe that the murderer is a Boston man, and they have assigned detectives to carry on an investigation in this city.

Evidence of a most startling nature is expected to develop within a few days. Coroner Lincoln admits that the authorities have unearthed many new facts. He said: "With the evidence in our possession we are confident of getting at the truth in this case. There are many mysterious features, but we expect to clear them up at the inquest. It is important that we withhold our information until after the inquest is over."

Medical Examiner H. P. Stimson of Tiverton, R. I., who performed the autopsy on the body of Mrs. Nickerson, said: "I told the coroner at the inquest just what I discovered when I examined the body. I do not think it proper for me to tell anyone else until after the inquest is held."

It is understood that Attorney-General William R. Greenough of Rhode Island will end his vacation just as soon as the inquest is finished, so that he may take charge of the investigation in case the coroner's report to him is that Mrs. Nickerson was murdered.

ASTOR ENGAGEMENT ATTACKED BY RECTOR AS UNHOLY ALLIANCE

Miss Katherine Force is the oldest sister of Miss Madeline Force, fiancee of John Jacob Astor and to whom Vincent Astor, son of her prospective brother-in-law is reported to be very attentive.

In one of the bitterest attacks ever made from a pulpit against the rich and fashionable set of New York, Newport, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church of Philadelphia, according to dispatches from that city to-day, denounced the coming marriage of Colonel John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeline Force, as "an outrage on common decency."

Colonel Astor and his fair fiancee are at Newport where they are being royally received amid a sort of social furore. They are quickly surrounded by admiring friends wherever they appear.

The Rev. Dr. Richmond declared that there was only one clergyman in the Episcopal church in America or England whom Colonel Astor could buy to marry him to Miss Force—and that no church was open to this clergyman. In unsparing terms the Philadelphia rector scored both Astor and the young woman, to whom he is engaged.

"Astor wants another beauty," says the clergyman. "The poor, weak girl of eighteen or twenty wants a rich society fellow whose autos, yachts and opera boxes will afford her a chance for social exploitation."

Bitterly Arraigns Couple.

In the course of his startling arraignment the preacher said:

The Episcopal church is opposed to divorce. We scorn unholy alliances, both among the poor of our slums and the rich society dwellers of Newport, Bar Harbor and other sinners' Summer retreats.

We abhor this Astor alliance. It is unholy in its origin, and its end will be a defiance of God's laws and of our holy religion. We need a national uniform divorce law which will put an end to this everything of court decrees by such as John Jacob Astor and the social set with whom he associates.

So to-day I denounce from my pulpit this coming Astor wedding. It's an outrage on common decency. It arouses all our moral anger. The Episcopal Church is opposed to this alliance. It is contrary to our canons and Mr. Astor will be socially ostracized by the best people the minute he contracts the bargain already made.

It is a marriage of convenience. Astor wants another beauty. The poor weak girl of eighteen or twenty wants a rich society fellow whose autos, yachts and opera boxes which will afford her a chance for social exploitation. Our girls and women are money mad. Lawes rule among the avenues of the smart set.

New York's Four Hundred to-day means Sodom. To rule the smart set means to manage scandal-ing parties, to run dances and to figure in divorce court proceedings every year or two.

Thank God, money no longer rules our church. It did once. There was a time when the Episcopal Church gave her blessing to Fifth avenue and Newport marriage speculators with a free hand. Some of our old-time bishops loved to touch to fills gold.

Not so to-day. We are following Christ, not Wall street. We are giving our honors to men and women who toil to establish a kingdom of justice, not to those who rule in misconduct and seek the praise of Sodom.

Jane Addams and Dr. Grenfell we honor. Astor and his gang we despise. There is not more than one Episcopal clergyman in America or England whom John Jacob Astor can buy to perform his wedding ceremony. He is persona non grata to-day in every parish of our church. No chancel is open to him, no choir will sing for him, no sexton stands ready to open a door for him.

If he gets the blessing of the church he will slink away from his home and secure through clink or cash some poor second-hand parson of a sect putting more confidence in filthy lucre than in the standards if Christ. The Astor family to-day is but one of our bonded households. The leading members of the tribe are social outcasts. Our is a social traitor to his native land. They are not a credit to our country. After the sermon Rev. Mr. Richmond refused to named the one Episcopal clergyman to whom he referred.

Wedding in Newport Cottage.

Colonel Astor, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Force and their daughter, Madeline, sailed into Newport in his splendid yacht, Norma. They all went ashore in a motor boat and had a delightful time. They took the Astor automobile for a drive about Newport, stopping later at Bailey's beach, where the future Mrs. Astor was presented to many of the cottagers. Luncheon was at Beechwood, the Astor residence.

Colonel Astor, his fiancee and her father were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, with Countess Granard and other prominent cottagers present.

Mr. and Mrs. Force have practically decided to take the cottage of Mrs. Woodbury Kane in Bellevue avenue, which was used by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas last Summer, an attractive wooden residence in the heart of the cottage colony.

It will be there that the marriage will take place, and before long, it is said, Colonel Astor has given his fiancee some wonderful jewels and the settlement already perfected is a large one, some placing it at $5,000,000.

WIFE SUES OVER PLATONIC FRIEND

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—Less than a year after her marriage, Mrs. Sarah Bond Hall Lohrent has brought suit for alimony against Walter Diesel Lohrent. Their home was in the exclusive Rittenhouse square territory. Mrs. Lohrent charges cruel and inhuman treatment, and says she and her husband lived together less than six months. The husband, when seen to-day, said: "The difficulty was over a woman friend of mine—a woman whom I have known for years in a purely platonic way—and of whom my wife knew before our marriage. She made this objection to my friendship with this woman before our wedding, but afterward she tried in every possible manner to break up the friendship, which was a beautiful, innocent thing."

PLAN BOAT TO TAKE 6,000 PASSENGERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A new side-wheel steamboat, which will be licensed to carry 6,000 passengers, the largest number in the history of steam navigation, is being constructed for the Hudson River Day Line. She will be known as the Washington Irving. She will have a new steam-propelled speed of twenty-four miles an hour, and will make twenty-seven miles when running with the tide. Steel, plate glass, and asbestos will be used extensively in her construction.

FOR PHYSICIANS AND HOSPITALS

How can physicians and hospitals afford to hold chronic kidney patients to certain failure on the orthodox treatment when by a simple addition recovery is possible in many cases? We record below another recovery in a case of Bright's disease declared incurable by the books.

Mr. John Anderson, 909 Bryan avenue, Fort Worth, Texas, wrote on December 6, 1910, from which we extract:

"I would like to have your opinion and will give you my symptoms. My legs, thighs and stomach are badly swollen. My doctor tried strong purges to relieve the dropsy, but to no purpose. Four months ago the swelling was so bad that my lungs were full and the elimination was almost solid with albumen. I was in bed three months previous to taking the Renal Compound. It has done me more good than anything else, but I am still bedfast."

Prescriptions were sent to aid the Compound to reduce the dropsy.

On January 27, 1911, Anderson again wrote as follows:

"I wish to thank you for the letter and prescriptions. I have completely recovered. I had a fine mule two days ago and am perfectly free from albumen. Barring weakness I feel as well as I ever did. I have been out of bed just three weeks, having been confined to bed nine months. It has taken about twenty-five bottles to cure me. Of course I was in a terrible condition and the results have surprised all who knew how bad I was. I do feel suppose you send a testimonial for you are perfectly welcome to use my name if you wish."

Bickley Mineral Co. are local agents for Fulton's Renal Compound.

FARMERETTES SEE NEWPORT

NEWPORT, Aug. 7.—The first time anybody ever saw Newport, the latter enjoyed by twenty farmerettes and pretty farm girlies from Miss A. H. Richmond's farm place at Hempstead, L. I., is the week here as guests of that lady, who is making a social experimenter. They lived the plain and busy people of the place have been. They were decidedly a hit.

Mrs. Belmont's guests were invested to a little French maid, and they soon had arrayed themselves in white duck skirts, white hats with green bands and regulation green and white. Then they were taken to Easton's Beach, where those who could be did so went in the water, some of neither wore bathing suits. Then they had a social and made friends with many and before long the farmerettes were as popular as they became. Excursions with a camera insisted on snapping them, and the girls at Mrs. Belmont's were as cordial as the guests.

The farmerettes' mothers have arrived and the young women came and had a cordial word for each.

After a chat she conducted them all about the estate, showing them the gardens, the greenhouses and the stables. Supper was served with a buffet and silver service.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

RICHARDS MAKES 'SWIM TO LIGHT

Sam Richards, who swam to Boston Light in the fast time of six hours and fifteen minutes, breaking the record held by Ross Pitcnof by 35½ minutes, showed no traces today of his wonderful exhibition of speed and endurance. Charles R. Disbrow of Philadelphia, who was forced to quit an eighth of a mile from Big Light, will make another attempt to reach the goal.

The other two swimmers were Ed. Gunderson of the East Boston Swimming Club and Lewis Hagen of Charlestown. Gunderson, who is only seventeen, made a fine try, but after battling five and one-half hours was forced to give up off Long Island Head. Hagan left the water at a point opposite the New England docks. It was his first swim in the light and he was all alone.

Richards turned his course due south after passing Nix's Mate and thus avoided the treacherous currents of the open channel. He was headed for Rainsford Island and after a mile and a half pulled from Long Island turned his course to the northward, three coal barges protecting him from the currents on the west and a fast outgoing tide driving him toward Fort Warren. Richards made wonderful time for the next two miles, still using the English overarm all the time.

At 1:14 Richards had his first view of the coveted goal, and with all the confidence in the world he made a grand spurt and came out of the water a winner.

The same favorable conditions did not favor Dobovan after passing Nix's Mate. The wind increased and kicked up a heavy sea and the choppy white caps dashed against the Philadelphian's every stroke. The fog was so thick that no one could see 100 yards in any direction, and the tide began to turn at quarter of three. Dobovan followed a much more exposed course than Richards. He was game to the core, but finally had to quit.

BROCKTON MAY GET JOHNNY WALLACE

Johnny Wallace of Cambridge, nephew of Bobby Wallace of the St. Louis Browns, may be signed up by the Brockton Club of the New England League for next year. He is playing a fast game in the outfield for the Columbias of Cambridge, and Manager Flanagan hears that he is as fast as his uncle. Young Wallace has been with Calgary in the Western Canadian League and led his team in hitting and stolen bases, but owing to an injury received while sliding, had to come home.

RASMUSSEN PRAISES WORK OF HJERTBERG

Dr. Rasmussen of Copenhagen, now visiting in Boston, is loud in his praise of the wonderful work Ernie Hjertberg, formerly trainer of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, is doing since he has been in the employ of Sweden. The showing at the Olympics in London in 1908 made a very good bowing, and getting the best of any kind in the running events. Since the announcement was made that the Olympics in 1912 were going to Stockholm, no time has been lost and Sweden will have a creditable team represent Sweden.

JOE TINKER TAKEN BACK BY CHANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 7. — Joseph Tinker, shortstop of the Chicago National League baseball Club, whose failure to exhibit sufficient enthusiasm in fielding in Saturday's game was given as the reason of a fine and suspension, has been returned to favor with Manager Frank Chance and President Murphy held a conference, after which it was announced that Tinker had been reinstated and would appear in the game with New York today.

COAST JEALOUS SAYS PAPKE

By ED W. SMITH.

We had Billy Papke of Kewanee on the long-distance phone last evening and asked him what he thought of the charges made by San Francisco that he had faked a fight there with Joe Thomas and couldn't fight in any city because he was regarded as an undesirable.

Joe finished reading the story in the AMERICAN. The Kewanee man roared over the telephone. "What are they all talking about? I am getting offers right along from clubs out there to do battle. If I'm barred the promoters don't seem to know it."

Fight With Thomas Straight.

"Looks to me as if they were trying to get back at me because I don't accept any of their offers to fight in that place. If the only way I can account for it. My fight with Thomas was straight enough and I beat him as quick as I could. I didn't put up a soft fight, that may be true, but I won, and that ought to be enough.

Ben Riley, representing Tom O'Day's club, offered me $5,000, with 10 per cent, over $14,000 for a fight there with Frank Klaus in September.

Jim Coffroth offered me $3,500, with $500 for expenses, and a privilege of 25 per cent of the gross for the six rounds and during the same month.

"Now I turned down all of these offers to go in New York and now they are trumping up these charges against me. I am going to box Sailor Burke August 22 and expect to take on Johnny Thompson on Labor Day.

It looks to me as if those fellows out there are simply jealous and sore because I won't have Billy Potts in handling my affairs in New York."

Thomas Also Makes Kick.

Joe Thomas, who fought Papke in what the Frisco people thought was a fake, also enters a strong protest against this talk. He is in Chicago at present.

"So they charge Papke with faking it with me do they? Why, he looked losing from my end. It's a lie, pure and simple, for that's the only word for it to use in this case. There never was any fake about it, especially as far as I was concerned. I fought my hardest and honestly believe that Papke did, too.

The fact that he didn't beat me inside of fifteen rounds, which presented a betting edge for those against the public, the fight went into the sixteenth round. Now, Papke didn't have any chance to beat me any quicker than that, if, indeed, he had any license to beat me at all in twenty rounds.

Trained Hard for Fight.

"My record of battles with Stanley Ketchel shows this. The first time I met Ketchel we went twenty hard rounds to a draw. The next time I met him I stopped him in two rounds and after that he got a decision in twenty rounds. Then fights were all in good, as Ketchel at that time.

I'm not defending myself at all in this matter, because there is just a possibility that he might have taken a fall purposely, but I do want to defend myself because I am entirely guiltless of anything I trained hard for the battle, although I wound up in the best of shape to fight a full admission. I didn't figure to beat me in any five rounds, as Papke certainly is a shame to get an innocent man in bad."

Papke left for Chicago last evening, where he is to engage in business with his father.

LONDON KNOCKS WELLS MATCH

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—London sports are living up to their reputation. They can't take a joke at all. Because Jack Arthur Johnson has agreed to take a chance with Bombardier Wells they are raising an awful howl and threaten to leave the country altogether. My word, what a tough jot.

They think it a cinch for Artha, and a goodly number say so, but they won't seem go near the clubhouse the day the affair comes off.

Say, look at the number of surprises we've had in the ring. Nothing is a cinch in the prize ring. Let's take a slant at some of the awful reverses of the past.

What the Sporting Life Says:

Here's a few that nearly tumbled us over when we heard of the result: Mc-Coy-Papke, Jeffries-Monroe, Mahler-Morrissey, Jem Roche, Sailor Burke-Sherry, Jeannette-Kuhlke, Johnson-Sailor Burke, Joe Gans-Jabez White, Abe Attell-Kid Mackey, Langford-Jack Fitzgerald.

Oh, and our number 57 runs.

Here is what Sporting Life has to say regarding the match:

"The sober judgment of British public opinion is making its logical voice heard in the matching of Bombardier Wells with Jack Johnson. The combination is a severe and general. There is practically a consensus of opinion on the only points we have tried to urge, namely:

(1) That Wells, physically as he is, has not the slightest chance against Jack Johnson, and therefore there can be no match in the true sense of the term.

(2) That Wells, who has a great future, if prospects not taking the trouble have been well advised to have waited a year or two before setting himself up against such a champion as Johnson.

Wells Won't Try to Win.

"Corcobus," of the Morning Advertiser, has also added his opinion, which in effect "damned the 'match' with faint praise." This is as far as he goes. He is "miles away from his article."

Wells is getting in the match except the money involved. It is quite clear that on his record Wells has no pretensions to beat Johnson. Even his warmest admirers seem to admit that. If he was at all good, as Ketchel at that time.

I'm not defending myself at all in this matter, because there is just a possibility that he might have taken a fall purposely, but I do want to defend myself because I am entirely guiltless of anything. I trained hard for the battle, although I wound up in the best of shape to fight a full admission. Golf Notes—News From the Links

Land has been presented to the Exeter Academy as a golf club house and links by Mrs. Mary Lyman of Northampton, N. H., the Press chairman of the organization announced today. Mrs. Lyman is the first woman to own the alma in that school. Although there is no golf course at present, it is expected that John Mahler will be engaged to make up the necessary links, as the school has been granted a generous site on the up-river side of the new playgrounds.

Miss Rose Kean, the largest driver in the State, has started a little "second degree game" all by herself in the Summer resort. Miss Kean is a long driving for the second hole, his ball landed on the roof of the chauffeur's home he climbed after it and after pitching away from the railing he shot the third beautifully onto the green.

Heinrich Schmidt of Worcester is still on his game and had both the low gross and low net scores in the open handicap tournament of the Portland Country Club a day or so ago. His total of 181 was for the two best. This tournament was extra fine for those representing which was not held in the State of Maine this year.

F. A. Martin, the old Dartmouth golfer, who won the championship of the Club in 1906 and last year, was the low score man in the qualifying round in the year's tournament. He also won his match in the first round.

The Southampton, L. I., tournament has a new classy field and second only in the leader in the qualifying round was W. K. Vanderbilt of Alamac Shantz, who will be remembered as a semi-finalist in the national championship here at the Country Club last year.

Plan for the Directors' cup at the Maplewood Golf Club drew many Boston players into the competition. Walter G. Clark of Woodland was low gross man along with G. I. Lawyer of Albany playing a second nine.

Horse News and Stable Gossip

That was a rattling good race that Sonoma trotted at Detroit, where she threw in the full talent goal and speedy by taking the measure of the phenomenally formidable mare, Dolly Spanker, in the 2:07 class. Sonoma turned the trick in the third heat, after Dolly had won the first two. Trainer John Mahler had the mare in hand when he promoted the sweepstakes coin. Much the daughter of Peter the Great, 2:04¾, Hallowtip and Sterling McKinney. By the way, the efforts to have this race decided at the Cleveland meeting have fallen through. Instead of the race being decided on the Grand Circuit, as it should have been, it will probably be decided at Captain Shaw is sparing for time, as Shaw has no money to gain by it, as he has expected of her this season.

That was a great race that the three-cornered contest in the 2:12 class furnished at the Detroit meeting, for the purchase prize of $1,000. Lucy Strong, Miss Simon, and the bay colt, Kentucky Boy, took part in the struggle, the result for two-year-old stallions to 2:30½. The colt was the first to be beaten, by Lucy Strong, but then took the next two heats in 2:08¾, 2:08¾, 2:08¾,

WANT BUTLER IN LOCAL REGATTA

Boston oarsmen are now turning their attention to the Labor Day regatta of the N. E. A. A. A., and unless plans miscarry there will be a feature event that should satisfy those who attend.

Before leaving Saratoga Butler of Toronto, the champion sculler, said that he would not be averse to coming to Boston and taking part in the Labor Day races. When asked if he would object to meeting Jack O'Neil of Halifax, who won the championship two years ago at Detroit, he said nothing would please him better.

James P. Fox, who is the moving spirit in the local regatta, was informed of Butler's statement and immediately began a correspondence with a view to bringing the two fast colonials together. He wrote to O'Neil, and in the event of getting a favorable answer he will telegraph Butler at Toronto.

The outlook for a batch of entries from New York for the local regatta is not very bright, but Capitola Hitz of the Metropolitans has promised to send entries for the Columbus Day event, which comes about a month later.

Local oarsmen will see one interesting race in connection with the regatta, for Heinz of Springfield says he will come and meet William Faulkner in the intermediate race. It will be remembered that Heinz was the favorite in this race at Saratoga, but was beaten by Faulkner after a hard race. Faulkner in turn was outrowed by Gere of the Unions of this city.

BENNETTS AFTER GAMES.

The Bennett A. A. of Somerville are without a game for August 12 and would like to fill the date with some strong semi-pro team on their home grounds.

BOSTON TO PLAY N. Y. FIREMEN

What promises to be an interesting contest between the New York and Boston Fire Department teams will be held on Saturday, August 12, at the American League grounds, and from New York comes the word that they are out for a win, and in order to accomplish this they expect the assistance—in fact it is known that the following will appear as rooters for New York: Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, who was fire commissioner last year when the Boston boys competed with New York; the newly appointed chief of the Fire Department, John Kenlon; Dr. William Archer, medical examiner of the Fire Department; secretary of Fire Commission, Mr. Edward Sheehan, and editor of "The Chief," Mr. Joseph J. O'Reilly. Word comes also that Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson and Ex-Chief Edward F. Croker are possibilities.

On the arrival of the team with their guests they will be breakfasted at the City Club. A tour of the park system will then be in order, when a shore dinner will be served. The game will be played at 3 o'clock, after which all will be entertained by the Boston Fire Department team and the dinner will be served at the City Club.

Among those who will address those present at the banquet will be Commissioner C. P. Daly, Chief F. A. Mahan, Judge M. J. Murray, Congressman W. F. Murray, ex-Commissioner John A. Derry, Hon. T. H. Dowd, Dr. Thomas J. Ball, Daniel Daley, Esq., of Brookline, as well also the prominent New York officials named above.

By R. W. LARDNER.

Cleveland's Naps, reinforced by the great Frenchman himself, will open a series of three games on the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon. They are the last of the visitors from the West, and the engagement with them will wind up the present home stay of the Sox.

Ray Collins, who is going like a house afire, will probably face the Orioles in to-day's encounter. He will have to show something far superior to that which Lajoie and Jackson are not easy to tame. However, Ray made Cobb and some of the other Tigers like it, and his mates are confident he can pitch them to a much needed victory over Cleveland.

Boston's hold on third place is none too strong. A clean-up in the Nap series will put them two games in front of their pursuers, but similar fronts things Cleveland did in New York, the next three games resulting in a series of unalloyed pleasure.

Against Collins, Manager Stovall will probably send in Gene Krapp, who refused to be stripped bare by Minors.

Naps Hit Winning Streak.

Mr. Stovall's team is having one of its peculiar Eastern trips. It started out in Philadelphia as if it didn't intend to do anything but lose in this part of the country. Then it went to Washington and kept on getting bumped.

At New York, the Naps took a sudden brace and did so much whining that people started after Hal Chase's scalp.

Two out of three here would just about give the Clevelanders an even break. Three straight would make the journey a success from their point of view.

There is a striking resemblance between the work of the Naps and that of the Sox. Both clubs are strong on surprises and their very uncertainty is enough to sustain the interest in them.

Naturally, some of the Cleveland players has anything to say about the report that Harry Davis has already signed up to manage them in 1913. There is probably a degree of truth in the tale.

If Terry hasn't signed, he is likely to do so later. But if he does become boss of the hirelings of Charley Somers, the chances are he will do the bossing from the bench, for Cleveland has two first basemen now who can hardly be called inferior to Harry.

George Stovall, "temporary manager," is one of them, and the other is Nap Lajoie himself, who can play that bag as she should be played. Nap has spent most of his career as a second-sacker and won't be shifted permanently unless someone capable of filling his place is found and something happens to Stovall.

Big Cy With Naps.

Cleveland hasn't a bad ball club at all. No club could be called weak that boasted a pair of clouters like Lajoie and Jackson and had a pitcher of Vean Gregg's class.

The Naps have failed so often to fulfill promises that it's useless to make predictions regarding them. Yet it is safe to say that they will bear watching in 1913.

Cy Young, who has broken even in his two clashes with Boston this year, may work one of the games here. Cy hasn't been going any too well of late, but his success in his previous appearance on the Huntington avenue lot may move Manager Stovall to give him a trial.

CINCINNATI, August 7.—Manager Tenney and his Rustlers came to town today for a series, beginning to-day, with the Reds, and it was easily to be seen that the Boston manager has confidence the Cincis will not have its usual picnic with his club that has been the case this season up to date.

The Rustlers lost the first game of Sunday's double header with the Cardinals, 8 to 0, and won the second, 5 to 1.

The cause of the loss of the first was the fact that the Bostonians could not gather a sufficient number of hits off the delivery of Rube Geyer, who allowed them but five safe wallops in the nine rounds.

The second game was won because the Cardinals could not hit Hunter Brown's curves a sufficient number of times. Brown, who had won the first game of the series, allowed but four hits and one run.

In the opening game Cardinals punched Hank Weaver to all corners, chasing him in the fourth inning and pounding Leon as easy. The Cardinals showed a flash of good form, stole at will on Kling, batted timely, and better still, fielded faultlessly. Today Mike Donlin was the chief attraction of the opposition, and the 15,000 fans present greeted the mussy one stylishly.

RED SOX PLAYERS IN A LEAKY BOAT

THE WEIRS, N. H., Aug. 7.—Several of the Boston American League baseball team visited here Monday in autos and were registered at a hotel. In the afternoon the party chartered a power boat for a sail on Lake Winnipesaukee and the boat, springing a leak, was beached on Governor's Island.

Tenney's Dream

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"WARM up, O'Toole," said Frederick Clarke.

"The time is ripe and the day is dark.

We want you to show the wonderful speed That helped St. Paul in the hour of need. Show 'em you ain't a minor league fool—

Warm up, O'Toole!"

O'Toole warmed up, then started to pitch, With a bashful grin and a nervous twitch. He passed Sweeney and he passed Spratt (Barney's blood was beginning to boil). Others he passed in a laughing list— The Rustler scorers could not desist. They scored and still continued to score Till the Boston tally was twenty-four. And Barney Dreyfuss exclaimed "He's Dutch!

Twenty-two thousand is much too much! Say, do you take me for a fool?

Make good, O'Toole!

The game was over, the day was done, When Barney Dreyfuss exclaimed "My son, Tenney can have you for nothing (and then he ain't smart).

Goodby, O'Toole, with all my heart."

BARRY MAKING GOOD

Malcolm Barry, the hot wizard farmed by the Brockton Club early in the season to Brantford in the Canadian League, is the league's leading swatter. Barry who is looked upon by Owner John W. McCue of the Shoe Cities as one of the best ball players in this section for his age,

HURT IN SPITE OF SHIN GUARDS

Manager Charles Dooin's injury proves that shin guards will not guard against all accidents in baseball and that a man may be seriously injured even if he be equipped with the contrivance which is supposed to make it impossible for a catcher to be hurt.

Dooin broke his leg despite his shin guards.

You didn't think that Dooin wore shin guards? Few did. When you saw the red haired manager catching you didn't notice the shin guards. They were not visible. But they were there just the same. Dooin wore them beneath his stockings.

And there's a story connected with that too. It was months and months before even the players suspected the presence of the guards. Then would go into him on full, go in feet first and cut his stockings. They would get no muttering that Dooin couldn't bad laugh since. One time a pair of spikes caught in the guards. Then the secret was revealed. The Philadelphia catcher was wearing them all right. But they were out of style.

That's for the benefit of those who immediately jumped to the conclusion that Dooin was without shin guards and that if he had possessed them he would have been uninjured.

Now the argument is going the rounds that a man may be injured even though wearing shin guards. Immediately comes the query, "What are they worth, of what good are they if a man can break his leg while wearing them?"

GREGG WORRIED BY DUFFY LEWIS

Ty Cobb, Jack Knight, Kid Elberfeld and Duffy Lewis are the hardest batters for Vean Gregg to pitch to. None of them has hit Gregg very hard, but they have made him work hard, and he would rather see any four batters in the league at the plate in a pinch.

Cobb has made five hits off Gregg in twelve times at bat. Lewis two hits in nine times up, Knight two in ten, and Elberfeld four in ten.

These fellows have always hit safe. I didn't want them to hit," said Gregg. "When I have tried to make them hit a curve they have hit fast balls and have hit curves when I tried to waste them.

"I finished a game at League Park in the last series with the Red Sox, and Lewis faced me once. I wanted him to hit my curve. I wasted a fast ball on the outside and didn't put very much stuff on it. Lewis reached over and hit it for two bases.

"Cobb watches the ball all the way up, and is hard to fool. He doesn't hit at bad balls. He generally waits for the ball he wants and if he doesn't get it he'll take a pass. One reason why I don't like to see Cobb at the plate is that he's very liable to get on, and he's a bad man on the bases.

"Elberfeld works a pitcher as hard as any player in the league, the ball comes at his head, but he won't dodge it, his body and he won't budge his feet. He stands there until no matter how close the ball comes to him.

Amusements.

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Near Genius

By DOROTHY DIX

A YOUNG woman who has artistic talent is engaged in painting lovely blue-eyed babs on large signboards as an advertisement for a certain brand of tobacco, and she is getting good money for doing it, and making a reputation as a first-class sign-painter.

I commend her example to all the other young women who are pursuing careers and who appear not to have quite enough speed to overtake success and fame.

There are tens of thousands of girls to whom Old Mother Nature has been a little more than kind and a little less than just. She has given them just enough talent to make them think they are geniuses and not enough to enable them to achieve their ambition.

They can paint well enough to win the admiring plaudits of their friends, but never well enough to command a market for their pictures. They can write well enough to sell an occasional story for a dollar or two, but never well enough to get into a good magazine. They can recite or sing well enough to have people tell them they should go on the stage, but, alas, if they ever get on the stage at all it is in the back row of the chorus.

There is nothing else so sad, so forlorn, and so tragical as these near-geniuses, for they take themselves seriously, and their lives are one blighting, hopeless struggle after the unattainable. They are unsuccessful where success is easy, and they scrape off with their gleam of talent that those in whose soul there is no spark of the divine fire at all.

A Piteous Thing.

It is terrible and a piteous thing that this disability should go to waste, as it so often does, because the woman who can't do a masterpiece isn't satisfied to do a profitable pot boiler. In other words, she isn't willing to apply her talent to some occupation in which it would enable her to achieve a distinguished success, whereas she is doomed to be a perpetual failure in essaying the task that is too big for her.

As an illustration of this I point to a woman who is now half-starving trying to make a living with her pen. This woman had a splendid situation in a Western city, as confidential secretary in a big firm. She got a large salary, was honored and esteemed and looked up to as extraordinarily successful; but because she could write a business letter that wasn't as stiff and bald as a wooden horse she became convinced that she was a literary genius.

Therefore she gave up her good job and packed her trunk and came on East, to be "in the atmosphere," and near to publishers, and she toiled eighteen hours a day turning out the dreariest, dullest, most pietistuous, most markedless stuff imaginable. Yet she has a certain facility of style, not enough to enable her to arrest the attention of an editor, but enough to make her invaluable as a secretary to a business man who perhaps lacked educational opportunities.

Then there is the girl—and her name is Miss Legion—who has graduated out of the art schools every year and who breaks her heart and ruins her health living in a studio on meals that she can cook over a gas jet while she vainly tries to sell her unsell able pictures. Yet this girl has undoubted artistic talent. She hasn't enough to enable her to paint a picture that will ever be hung in the academy, but she has enough to enable her to make a fortune if only she would apply it to the art of dress making.

How to Use It

She understands the beauty of lines and has a God-given sense of color, and if she would only use her talent in the construction of hats and gowns she might come her own prize, and women would fall over each other to get it. For it is sadly true that women will pay $300 for a creation to adorn their back and fifty-five cents for a picture to hang on their wall.

One of the chief reasons that women fail so often in their undertakings is because they are so seldom willing to do the thing they are fitted to do. If they feel that they have any more intelligence than the ordinary women about them, they immediately jump to the conclusion that they must do something wonderful and grand and spectacular.

They haven't the ability for the big thing, and they fail, whereas they could have done the little thing and succeeded. Many a woman who really has genius, talent and insight into character, but who has been blessed off the stage as an actress, could have made a great success as a saleswoman, or made a fortune as pastry raiser had she given the same amount of study to the interpretation of the character of a bun that she has to that of Lady Macbeth.

Men are wiser in this respect than women. Every man who perceives that he has got a little more gray matter than his brother, doesn't rush into a career. He puts it into making more artistic furniture, or devising a better way of selling pickles, or growing more potatoes to the acre, but a woman who gets an inkling that she knows a thing or two that her sister doesn't know, espouses a career and starves.

It's a million times better and more profitable to be an humble thing well than a big thing badly. It is better to hit the bara door squarely thun to aim at the stars and miss fire, as a piece of philosophy that women will do well to consider.

And so I commend to the near-geniuses the example of the young woman who is putting her artistic talents to use in painting artistic signs.

The History of the Corset

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

IN the August number of "Good Housekeeping" magazine there is a wonderfully interesting article on the history of the corset. The illustrations are made by Nell Brinkley and, by permission of the "Good Housekeeping" magazine, we reproduce one of her beautiful pictures here.

This picture depicts the Grecian maid of olden times. Then there were no corsets, but the women wore the very sensible Greek ribbon girdle, crossed over the shoulders behind and brought over the arms like braces. This afforded the lungs plenty of room for breathing and brought hardly any pressure to bear upon the stomach. Besides, it gave the girls of those times a graceful symmetry of form seldom seen among our women of to-day, who encase themselves within a steel-ribbed instrument of torture called a corset.

Other beautiful pictures in this series by Nell Brinkley are to appear on this page. Watch for them.

The Old Maid's Mistake

ONCE Upon a Time there lived an Old Maid, she did not call herself a one.

Spin or a Bachelor Girl; she was frank and honest about it, and despised such subterfuges, and admitted that she was an Old Maid.

She also made an admission much more fatal; she admitted her loneliness, and in one day in a moment of self pity left Lonesome Land by walking from the altar with a man.

There is always reason why one should congratulate one's self, and never a reason for self pity, and those who pity themselves are making room for trouble, and that is what happened to the Old Maid who pitied herself because she was lonesome.

Worse Conditions

She never thereafter was lonesome, but she found there are conditions worse than a peaceful sojourn in Lonesome Land.

She gave up a good position to work for her board and clothes without a Sunday or an evening off. She left the employ of a man who always treated her fairly, fearing she would quit his employ if he didn't to work for a man who was always unfair, knowing that she was engaged to work for him for life.

The trouser of her maiden days were imaginary ones; those of her married life were real. From a dweller in air-castles, she became a dweller in a real house with a roof that leaked. She became so occupied with household duties that she neglected her books, and as a reward heard her husband's praise of the fine appearance of the woman who had nothing to do. Her business ability, which was greater than that of most men, was therefore devoted to rolling the material for one pie crust thin enough to do for two, and to making a time-saving for the cooking of meats and vegetables.

Only a Woman

All of which would have been a joy if the man had been like the men she met in the books, but he wasn't. No men are.

She saw her husband make business mistakes that were fatal, and when she warned him that he was about to do a wrong thing, she was asked, "What do you know about business? You are nothing but a woman!" With such a display of strength of character greater than his, she was forced to spend her life in the obscurity of pots and pans, trusting the financial future of herself and her children to a man who thought himself a Napoleon of finance and who hadn't the judgment necessary to run a peanut stand.

Some years after her marriage her husband went out one morning, slamming a door in his regular morning tantrum so hard that pictures and plates tumbled to the floor.

The noise awakened both babies and they set up a howl.

"At last," said the ex-Old Maid as she tried to soothe the babies and pick up broken china and pictures at the same time, "I am no longer Lonesome."

And having said that, she said ALL.

Too Risky

WHEN the sirens saw foxy Ulysses,
They resolved he should never get past,
So they blew him their daintiest kisses,
And most languishing glances they cast.
But he lashed himself up to the mast,
So he couldn't break loose, don't you see,
He'd have jumped overside if he hadn't been tied,
And I guess it's the same way with me.

At the beach they have tucked up their tresses
And you hear no unsuitedly hails,
They have rakes, though slightly, to dresses,
And to stockings in place of their scales;
But the danger to sea-going males,
If they happen by chance to be free,
Is as great, it would seem, as old Homer could dream,
And it might be too risky for me.

So it's best not to take any chances,
I am just like Ulysses, the wise,
And avoid all the tempting fair glances
That are shot from the sea-maidens eyes,
And that needn't cause any surprise,
For I'm tied just as fast as can be,
And I'd be a great goose if I tried to break loose
When my wife's at the seashore with me.

Hard Lines

"AFTER the crash," imparted the first hospital surgeon to the second, "I run over to where it lay on the pavement; and when I raised it up I saw at once that the face was smashed, while a gaping hole was torn in the"—

"Pardon me, doctor," broke in the medical student, who had caught these words as he was about to pass into the consumptive ward, "but if you have no objection, I'd like to take a few notes on that accident case." He pulled his notebook from his pocket. "Was the case a child?"

"No," the surgeon informed him, to his embarrassment, "I was speaking of my umbrella."

BUT application was made to all the employment agencies in London and the suburbs in vain; and eventually after various other means of unearthing the woman had failed, recourse was had to a discreet advertisement in several of the daily papers: "If Miss Sarah Maunsell, lately employed by Mr. Herr of Surrey, will apply in person to Messrs. Kipling & Beecher, Solicitors, of Bedford Row, London, W. C., she will learn something to her advantage."

This appeal was repeated for several days before Messrs. Kipling & Beecher heard from Miss Maunsell. At last they received a letter from Harrogate, signed "S. Maunsell," stating that, as the writer was in the position of housekeeper to an invalid, she could not leave her place to visit London. She had just happened to see the advertisement, not being in the habit of looking at the papers every day, and she would be glad to hear from Messrs. Kipling & Beecher.

Scotland Yard was, of course, responsible for the advertisement, but it had not been considered wise to risk alarming the woman, who might have a horror of the police. When the latter arrived, therefore, a detective from the criminal investigation department was detailed to travel to Harrogate by the following train.

He was an ambitious fellow, whose name—Richard Gaylor—was already favorably marked at headquarters, and he was the "plain grown-up" who had beguiled Dapper Barnard. He was about thirty, but did not look more than twenty-one, at most, in face or figure. "Cupid" was his nickname, and it was not inappropriate to the blue-eyed, curly-haired young man, who had deep dimples in pink cheeks, like a girl's.

The address given in Miss Maunsell's cramped and prim hand-writing was "Care Edwin Jones, Esq., Hedge House, Aylwin Road, Harrogate," and the detective found the place without difficulty. It was a rather desolate-looking villa, and at some distance from other houses, and it had an air of deserted gentility and "stand-offishness."

The high gate was locked, and having rang, Gaylor was obliged to wait outside in a drizzling rain for some moments. He was just about to pull the old-fashioned bell again when he saw the front door open, and a thin old woman came with mincing steps down the path. The upper half of the gate had a square of lattice, and through this he was able to form some judgment of Miss Maunsell's character (if it were Miss Maunsell who approached) before she opened the gate.

She had a high, prominent forehead, light-brown, sallow skin, a red-rag of a mouth, the eyes of an indolent fanatic, and sparse gray hair pulled tightly back in an unaccompanying way under a cap like a half-baked bun. Used to face-reading, Gaylor made up his mind in a flash as to the right way of managing the grim old creature.

"What Have You to Tell?"

"Is this Miss Maunsell?" he asked, politely, but not gushingly. To gush at a person of her type would be to court disaster.

"It is," she replied shortly.

"I'm here on the business of Messrs. Kipling & Beecher's advertisement," announced the detective.

If Miss Maunsell felt surprise, she did not show it. "You can come in," she said. Then, being evidently economical of speech, she led the way into the house. It was old-fashioned, but unimpressive. "Gloomy as a sarcophagus," was Gaylor's mental comment as he followed the stiff figure down a narrow corridor to the back of the house.

She opened the door of a moderate-sized room like a servants' hall. "My sitting room," she remarked. "We will not be disturbed, for I am the only servant. Mr. James is a paralytic. Take a seat." Gaylor obeyed, subsiding upon a hard, high chair by a clumsy dining table. "Miss Maunsell sat opposite him, on a chair of the same depressing description.

"What have you got to tell me to my advantage?" she inquired, wasting no time in getting to the point. She had the whining, sawing suggestive of the cockney, which is characteristic of the lower middle classes in some parts of Yorkshire; and Gaylor made up his mind that the woman had returned to her native country. She had all the hardness of the North at its worst.

"I have to tell you that if you answer a few questions I've been sent to ask, possibly it may save you from being called as a witness in the second adjourned inquest of the Horeward case, which will come on in a fortnight's time."

"I can't leave my place here to be a witness in any case," rasped Miss Maunsell, "and I wouldn't be of any use if I could, for I never heard of the Horeward case."

"What! Never heard of the Horeward murder case over a week ago?" exclaimed Gaylor, surprised that a human being could have existed in such cloistered ignorance.

"Are you talking of the Horeward Friars' Mostly?" asked the housekeeper.

"Yes."

"Who was murdered?"

"Lady Herreward. Is it possible you haven't seen in the papers—"

Didn't See Papers

"Why should I see the papers? Talk likely I'd spend my money on 'em, and Mr. James, my master, cares for nothing but old books, the older the better. I'm no woman to gossip with neighbors, Miss Maunsell answered, with an air of dignity. "Gloomy as a sarcophagus," was Gaylor's mental comment as he followed the stiff figure down a narrow corridor to the back of the house.

She opened the door of a moderate-sized room like a servants' hall. "My sitting room," she remarked. "We will not be disturbed, for I am the only servant. Mr. James is a paralytic. Take a seat." SKIN AFFECTIONS ARE OFTEN CONTAGIOUS

How to Prevent Them

The skin and its millions of pores are open to every form of contagion, from the accidental cut, abrasion, burn, or the appearance of boils, carbuncles or felons, to the more serious diseases of the skin. It is not necessary to mention but suggest that every family and every one county, ready for immediate use, the world's great standard skin remedy—Resinol Ointment. This ointment, indorsed and recommended by thousands of physicians, nurses and experts, remains the standard of excellence. It is scientifically compounded from natural ingredients, each one, and all together, particularly adapted to the skin. It is put up in screw-top opal containers, selling for fifty cents and a dollar, according to size. Resinol Ointment is as easy to apply as cold cream. It is utterly impossible for it to harm the most delicate skin, for it contains only the highest grade of remedial agent, without even a trace of mercury or lead, or any other poison. The ointment is sold by all druggists. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

No!

By H. A. W.

NO greater word in any land or clime
A word that rules from immemorial time;
But common sense must first decree its force,
To follow onward toward the righteous course.

Had sense through centuries sensed its power,
No crimson fields would stain this hour;
War would be but a remote vision of pain,
Peace would proclaim its splendid, glorious reign.

Could rulers hear the mothers' wailing sighs,
And note the echoes of their children's cries,
Not curse, but often, would they give a stirring NO!
To appeals of passion 'gainst imagined foe.

Could wives and children view the scarlet flood,
Fields drenched with husbands', fathers' blood,
Reason would then proclaim a thunderous NO!
To the monarch whom ambition stirs to strike the cruel blow.

COULD the thief whose talents earned him more than theft,
With honest toil, when fo youth a tempt home had left;
Now in fancy see the steel-barred cells and prison walls,
Cry NO! his answer to Temptation's calls.

Could reason full depict the drunkard's mind,
With direful miseries of heart-rending kind;
A forceful NO! would answer his friends' call,
That "one drink more" to him be bitter gall.

Could the gambler's vision view approaching woes,
And note the sorrows, ills and ragged clothes,
To callous friends' calls to games of chance,
Would be a scornful NO! a withering glance.

No! No! No! No! those little words,
Cessation hosts could quell,
Create an earthly paradise, where no thieves nor drunkards dwell;
Death-dealing shells a mighty power may show,
But a greater force than all is the decisive-meaning NO!

The Storekeeper

It Doesn't Pay to Keep Everything.

By KENNETT HARRIS

"SEEMS like you hain't got much selection," grumbled the sallow-faced woman in the rose-pink sunbonnet as she fingered the belt of Hayseed's storekeeper had just taken from the shelf. "Hain't you got but the green an' the yaller in that?"

"There's the cutest shades I've got," replied the storekeeper.

"I s'pose I'll have to take the yaller then," said the woman, discontentedly. "Cut me off fo'teen yards."

When the woman had left the store Old Man Somarindyk was moved to give the storekeeper some advice. "One of these yer fine days some feller'll move in here with a stock o' goods, an' then you'll have a right smart o' time on your hands that you won't have no use for," he predicted.

"I might have a right smart of goods on my hands that I didn't have no use for if I wasn't keerful about my buyin'," the storekeeper retorted.

"When you come to study on that, there's suthin' in it," observed Washington Hancock. "I reckon there's about five hundred brands of eatin' tobacker, an it's the same way with whiskey, but seems like a feller'd be tempted to take more'n was good for him if he had to sample 'em all. As long as Rufe don't run plumb out o' Pick-Axe I'm satisfied to buy Nigger-head, an' when Pete gives me my ruthers, between Bourbon and rye I feel sic that way all the ch'ice I needed. I like a chance to pick an' choose, but I don't want too diagnosed much to choose from.

Same With Girls

"It's the same way with gals," Han cock continued. "I rickerleck when Yank Adams first came out here from Massachusetts. He was a awful shy young feller, he was, an' mighty likely lookin', an' he come part ercount of the Goose Neck Adamses, an' was some fra-a-way kin of his'n an' part ercount of his daddy's farm bein' worn out.

"About a year after this Mitt Parker Adams says to him was that a good-lookin' hard-workin' feller like him ought to be able to p'suade some gal or another to marry him. 'You must be nigh on to thirty, haint ye?' says she.

"Yank throwed back his haid an' laffed. 'Maybe I'm 'proached, an' maybe I'm not, an' on my bended knees I could p'suade one of 'em,' he says. Then he digs me in the ribs an' winks at me.

"'I don't see the joke,' sez Mis Adams. 'Nice gals ain't sech a plenty, nor so easy to suit,' she says. 'An old bach like you migh have a right smart o' trouble.'

"'It ain't so awful much trouble for a man to crook his finger,' says Yank, grinnin. 'Still,' he says, 'I don't ca'culate to crook it for a while yit. Not but what I've any objection to makin' myself agreeable otherwise, an' some day or another I may, but I'll make a ch'ice, after I've looked 'em all over. I reely like gals.'

"Mis Adams didn't say nothin' to that. She just give him a look. I didn't know jest what that look meant, but I reckon it seem partickler set up. Seemed like a right clever feller for a Yankee. Well, when I got him alone, I brung back the subject an' axed him why he was so dang-gone cock-sure about his finger, bcuz it didn't look to me different from any other finger.

"He looked at me sorter s'prised. 'I didn't claim it was different,' he says. 'All I'm stands to reason when there's such a pesky many gals an' so dad blame few boys, a feller gets more or less run after an' he's got to be s'mighty cute to dodge 'em.'

"'What do you want to dodge 'em for?' says I.

"'They'll marry you if you don't,' says he.

"'That don't hurt any harm,' I says.

"'It might'nt if a feller picked the right one,' says Yank. 'The dickens of it is there's such a v'riety, an' one's got black eyes that'll curdle hair'nsome an' another's got blue eyes, an' she's pretty as a peach, an' there's the little dumpling with dimples an' the willery kine an' ol' kines, an' seems like whichever one a feller picked he'd wish he'd got the other, an' when they've all smilin' an' lookin' at a feller sidewise an' puckerin' up their lips at him, how's he a-goin' to settle on any particular one?

It Was Different

"'I see that the way it is back where you come from?' I sat him.

"'Why, cert'nly,' says he. 'Ain't it that way here?'

"'You'll find out,' I says, an' sure enough he did. The first time he went to a church social he found out that there was about three boys for any one gal that was anyways good lookin' at all, an' about the on'y ones that hadn't beaus was Lis Bettreon, who was bowsher's sis, an' Mis Cass Ritchie, who'd buried her second husband.

"First off, Yank sparked up to some of the likeliest lookin' ones, but he didn't seem to make no particular headway, an' he tried the best lookin' an' went on until he'd about made the rounds; but he didn't seem able to get no stiddy company on. One thing, bin bein' a Yankee didn't he'p, an' when Mis Adams had kine o' told around about the way he talked when he first came, so blimby he got powerful lonesome. Finally he went around to Ol' Man Betterson's one Sunday an' set out on the gallery with Lis, an' Thursday of the next week they got married.

"The first time I seen him after the wedd'in' I axed him about it. 'Kine o' sudden, warn't it, Yank?' I says.

"'I d'know as it was,' he says, 'I never calc'lated to live a single life after I'd made up my mind who I wanted.'

"That wasn't you sort o' suddent makin' up your mind?' I says.

"'I guess not,' says he. 'There wasn't only her an' the Widder Ritchie to pick from, an' I jist despise the Widder Ritchie.'

"Well, I reckon he was right," remarked Eben Baxter, "an' bubbe Rufe's right in his theory of stockin' up. If he only got the yaller an' the green lady-cloth an' a customer ain't got no use for the green, she's jest nachally got to take the yaller."

"Or go without," suggested Old Man Somarindyk.

"There's some things that men an' women plumdy ain't a-goin' to go without," said Washington Hancock.

Very Useful

JOHN REDMOND, the Irish leader, was annoyed on his last visit to Cork by the commiserating and ignorant remarks on Ireland by a woman of a banjaxed type.

"Is it true, Mr. Redmond," this woman finally asked, "that the Irish eat nothing but potatoes?"

Mr. Redmond laughed harshly.

"That is quite true, madam," he replied, "and when we have eaten the potatoes inside, we clothe ourselves with the skins."

Stung

IT was a game where everyone had to make faces, the one who made the ugliest grimace to win the prize. It seemed as if all did their worst. Then the judge went up to one woman who was sitting off in one corner.

"Madam," said he, "I think you have won the prize. Allow me to——"

"Keep away!" she said haughtily; "I wasn't playing."

DESTRUCTION BY MICE.

Mice are easily gotten rid of by use of Rough on Rats; which is not poisonous to handle, only so when eaten. If they eat enough to do much less quantity, but if overrun with mice mix Rough on Rats with flour in proper order as would lay on a five-cent nickel piece, or half of a level teaspoon with flour, a large tablespoonful of butter or lard or other grease; mix it thoroughly in a saucer, then on slices of bread cut thin spread the mixture thinly over the bread in all its parts and work it into the fibre of the bread, then cut the bread in little half to one-inch squares and place these about in cupboards, closets, bureau drawers, etc., and your mouse trouble will be over for a long time. One small box of Rough on Rats should keep your house or barn free from mice for two years. It is equally effective for Roaches, Ants, Bedbugs, Flies, Prairie Dogs, all "varmint." Rough on Rats is not a catch-penny, money-making preparation, but a proven thing of merit, a sure thing, the old reliable, unbeatable exterminator, that fools the Rats and Mice for a long time, but never fools or disappoints the buyer.

ROUGH ON RATS IN OUT BUILDINGS.

In setting Rough on Rats in out buildings mix with it well with any food decided upon, separate into small bits, place on several floors, large and put up these here and there under the out floors. Close up all openings large enough for Rats or Mice. One 25c. box of Rough on Rats, being all (95%), poison, will make enough mixture to clear out in one or two nights setting, thousands of Rats and Mice. Mix it 1 to 15 to 20 of food used for Rats and 1 to 40 to 50 for Mice. See directions for Prairie Dogs and other "varmint." Roaches, Ants, Bed Bugs, Flies, etc. 15c., 25c. at Druggists. E. S. CLAUDE ECLAIR HERO
CURSES! SHOTS WERE ONLY HEARD HERE TO WARN THE HUNTER. WHERE CAN HE BE ?

Clinging to the life of the wheel, Claude Eclaire is bravely trying to rescue the wounded Desmond, who holds Rosamond in his grasp. It is an apparently impossible task, but true heroism never quails at difficulties. If it did, it would cease to be heroism.

What does Desmond care for Claude's futile attempts? Nothing. He has a firm belief that he will eventually conquer the hero, whom he considers a fraud. A villain cannot understand the motives that inspire a hero. He imputes his own rascally impulses to the better man.

Curiously often Jenus one into strange adventures. Curiosity impels a gigantic giraffe to peer over the precipice, and since its long neck gives the giraffe unusual opportunities for peering, this one easily perceives Claude, and pokes its head down close to the jeopardized party.

As one can tell to what rubber-necking may lead one. The giraffe has curiously thrust its head into the loop of the lasso which Claude is throwing. Startled, the animal throws up its head, thus lifting the lasso and elevating Claude, who holds tight, to a lofty position.

As the giraffe dashes around it is a simple matter for Claude to reach down and seize Desmond and Rosamond, who are then in the dangerous position of avoiding around the neck of a half-crazed giraffe. The situation looks blacker for all hands.

Worse and worse, a hunter sees the bounding giraffe and is about to shoot at it. "I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he tries to warn the hunter, if the bullet kills the giraffe, what will happen to the party? To-morrow's picture will show. In the meantime observe how—

No Fledgling So Easily Trapped As the Child Man

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

It recently happened that an adventuress in search of what some women consider a patent right to respectability—a husband—looked far and wide and found those near her own age too wise and wary to be caught in her net; so she spread it before a college door and caught the feet of a young boy as he was stepping out with his school books under his arm. Gathering the net tightly around him, she threw her prize over her shoulder and marched off to a preacher.

For her it was only an incident of sport; for him it will prove a tragedy that will shadow his life, yet nothing is done to prevent a recurrence of such tragedies.

There is no one in the world as immature as a boy, and largely because he is satisfied that he has reached maturity. Of man's stature, he doesn't know there must also be a man's brain, a man's heart, a man's wisdom and a man's judgment to complete the man.

Susceptible to Flattery

There is no one so susceptible to flattery, for the reason that it is his first unrestrained taste of a dish pleasing to the palate and seductive of the senses. His mother and his father have, all his life, pulled him away from the dish, knowing that, for one so immature, the eating is dangerous.

To this immature, susceptible being there comes a woman whose knowledge of men was not gained in sitting at the feet of her father or brothers. She wants a husband; those men older than herself, or near her age, have gained a knowledge of women that enables them to tell the counterfeit from the real, and their walk warily when she spreads her net.

There is only one other way she can get a man, by catching a boy and keeping him till he grows.

She knows he will gorge himself to the degree of unconsciousness, when he can be taken captive more easily if urged to eat without restraint of the dish of flattery, and she urges it upon him.

She coaxes him with compliments, she blinds him with adoration, she flatters him by telling him he is a MAN, when every one else in the world is isolating he is still a boy, and he walks right into the middle of her net and never knows, till years after he has reached the preacher man, that a net was spread.

May Go to Extremes

This matrimonial kidnaping will, unless checked, result in the adoption of boys in regulars from orphans' homes by women who wish to raise their own husbands. The adult specimen of the male is so hard to catch, and the infant specimen so easy of capture, that the day is coming when a woman can get a husband by burying him with a marble or a baseball bat.

The process with the adult male is long and tedious; he can be flattered, of course, but greater care must be taken in serving him judicious doses, and in sugar-coating everything his suspicious nature may regard as a motive.

He is irresponsible and should be protected against himself. If parents, by every law of love, are expected to snatch matches from a baby they should be backed up and abetted by laws stronger than those of love when they seek to prevent young men getting into more serious harm.

If a woman steps out with sugar in her outstretched hand, seeking to entice into her net a boy many years her junior, the boy's father and mother, though he may be of legal age to make a fool of himself and a wreck of his future, should be given the right to lock him up until he gets his eyes open.

Always a Tragedy

Such a marriage is always a tragedy, and if the woman who enters into it gives "love" as her excuse she profanes the word. She may claim a maternal tenderness for the boy, but even that sentiment doesn't ring true.

The years are never as kind to a woman as to a man, and if she is twenty years his senior on the wedding day, in ten years she will appear forty, and when he is in his prime as will be waking through life mated with a woman who looks like his grandmother.

Freckles

Freckle-Face! Freckle-Face! Freckle-Face! FRECKLE-FACE! How Do You Like It?

If you have freckles you need Kintho! That's as sure as freckles! Hot Summer winds and sunshine bring them out in all their hideousness, and Kintho is ready for you at Houghton Dutton and Rider-Jaynes, or wherever toilet articles are sold. A two-ounce package of Kintho is enough for most light cases, but the most obstinate freckles are easily and quickly removed, under a guarantee of money back if it fails.

"Use Kintho Soap, too. It will not only help give the freckles a push, but it is delightful for toilet use."

A Thrilling Story of Wireless and War

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

"YOUR what?" cried the captain.

"This woman is my wife!" repeated the operator, without so much as a glance at the panting girl's colorless face. "As you may have the distressure to discover, she is a civilized being, and brutality has no particular fascination for her!"

"And what's all that to do with it?" demanded the captain, warming up to a scene from which he could usually wring his sardonic delights.

"It has this to do with it—that she is making this trip as a passenger. I mention the fact because you may see her in this cabin again, at many times, and at hours quite as unusual as the present."

"I will, will I?" retorted the other.

"You will! And where more, so long as I do my duty by this ship, and by my company, her presence here calls for no insolence either official or unofficial!"

"You be damned!" roared the master of the ship, aghast at such effrontery.

"There again I'm afraid I must both disappoint you and disagree with you. And at the same time I'd like to call your attention to the fact that this is a wireless station, and that it stands under the protection of the Berlin International Convention!"

"To hell with you and your Concordats! This is my ship!——"

"Precisely; and I, unfortunately, have been put here to do my work, and——"

"Yes, by Heaven! broke in the irate captain, "you're here to do your work! You were stuck in here under my nose, for reasons I don't understand; but when you're here you're goin' to do your work as I say! And what's more, I want you to bear in mind that I intend to stay master of this ship!——"

"And while I'm master of this ship I want no insolence from upstart wireless stretchers! So you do your despatchin' in your hours, and when I say so, or I'll ship you back to your company in irons."

The Only Way Out

The captain of the Lamington wheeled about and strode out of the cabin, swinging the door shut with a slam that loosened flakes of whitened paint from the ceiling beams.

"So he's against us, too?" murmured the operator.

There was a moment of unbroken silence before the woman looked up.

"Why did you say that to him?" she demanded, trembling with indignation, while her voice took a little as she spoke. "How dare you say a thing like that?"

McKinnon crossed the room until he stood close at her side.

"I had to say that," he answered. "It was the only way out."

"A like a base lie like that—the only way out?"

"Yes, the only way, for now that man must not suspect."

"Suspect what?"

"What each of us knows!"

"But you have just challenged his power; you've disclaimed his authority! What can he do?"

"He can do anything! On the high seas he's king over this little floating kingdom of his!"

"And you, too, are under him?"

"As much as one of his stokers, in a way."

"But what have you gained by a lie like this?"

He found it hard to understand her scruples, to fathom her indignation. He stooped over and started to speak again.

"Wait!" she cried. "Don't say anything more until I try to explain what it means to you."

He peered out along the deck and then slipped the bolt in the cabin door before he turned to her again.

"Listen! What I have to say is only the other half of your own story, of what you yourself have said. If Durna and his army are shut up in Guarigui, it's because they're there without ammunition."

"You know that!" she cried.

"Ganley Knows It"

"Ganley knows it. His man Ganley knows it. He knows it because he's been the cause of it. Six hundred thousand rounds of ammunition went out of Mobile for the Lamington troops, for Ding and his men. They were carried to Puerto Leonardo on the Santa Anna, secretly, in barrels that were labeled and invoiced as cement, so that the barrels bulged a little as she spoke. Below—forty-six barrels with cement on the heads bulging a sprinkling of cement and the main space full of cartridges packed in excelsior. Every pound of it Ganley's. This can't be true! It almost stunned the girl at his side.

"Every word of it's true. But let me go on. De Brigard and his men have been in almost as bad a predicament. This advantage was useless unless by and by ammunition for his own men.

"That's where Ganley came in. His agents found that grand iron mine packed in cases, weighed up to just about what a case of cartridges would. So they bought eighty-eight cases of iron dug from a Rhinelan River factory town and forwarded down to New York. It was consigned to Leonidas, properly enough, as the site of a syndicate for fluxing purposes.

"The law compels all such exporters to file with the port collector a distinct declaration of the goods shipped, the country shipped to, and the name of the consignee. This has to be accompanied by oath. Besides the due inspection of the shipment, the shipper has to make affidavit to the correctness of the contents of the entry to which any such goods are subject, in this case——"

"But how do you know this, Mr. McKinnon? Let's say that I shouldn't doubt my work as a wireless operator; but this is the real point, to which I needn't now concern us, those innocent looking cases of powdered iron were packed with cartridges. Those cases were packed with ammunition, which you say Ganley's syndicate shipped in to fill up the vessels and cover the real contents!"

Recompense

STRAIGHT through my heart this fact to-day
By Time's own hand is driven:
God never takes one thing away
But something else is given.

I did not know in earlier years
This law of love and kindness;
I only mourned through bitter tears
My loss, to sorrow's blindness.

But, ever following each regret
O'er some departed treasure,
My sad, repining heart was met
With unexpected pleasure.

I thought it only happened so;
But Time this truth has taught me—
No least thing from my life can go
But something else is brought me.

It is the Law, complete, sublime:
And now, with Faith unshaken,
In patience I but bide my time
When any joy is taken.

No matter if the crushing blow
May for the moment down me,
Still, back of it waits Love, I know,
With some new gift to crown me.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Young—Yes, lady, for a whole year I turned my back on liquor.

Lady—Ah, my noble man, what were you then?

Young—I used to drive a brewery wagon, mother.

* * *

"Is that ten of yours industrious?"

"Well, rather. She tried to do two days' work in one today."

"Hick sort?"

"Just fitted a double-yoked egg."

* * *

Miss Cosmo, dear, kiss my cheek and make it up.

He—I'll kiss it, but I think it wants any more making up."

* * *

Missionary—And do you know nothing whatever of religion?

Cannibal—Well, we got a taste of it when the last missionary was here."

* * *

He—I dreamed last night that your father was dead.

She—Horrors! I heard you laugh in your sleep.

* * *

He—You know, my dear, X is an unknown quantity.

She—I know it is. I've never seen one since I married you."

* * *

"How have you been?" she asked, sweetly.

"Very bare my dear," he replied.

"Your hair or bare head around a storeboard?" was her next question.

"Well," he answered, slowly, "not all that bare."

* * *

Judge—Is it necessary for you to quit your daughter's lessons to complete her musical education?

Brown—Yes, I can't stand the infernal racket for more than an hour.

* * *

He—You promised last night that your kisses would be sweeter.

She—Hence I heard you laugh in your sleep.

SHERIFF STIRS PIER GAMBLERS

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 7.—Gamblers and their friends and employes have received a shock when Sheriff John R. Wilcox and a staff of deputies arrived here and instituted a search in the Surf Hotel, which is run by William H. Wooley. The sheriff was in quest of gamblers, gaming and gambling paraphernalia. He made quite a sensational haul.

The arrival of the sheriff came, it is said, as a little surprise party. The pier was practically quiet, and except Clark's block presented a forlorn appearance.

NAVY YARD WIRELESS STATION IS BEST

While the new wireless station in charge of Lieutenant Commander Nary Yard, U. S. Edmonds and W. J. Stedman, P. C. Johnson and Edgar and J. J. Harrigan, who are radio operators, in their opinion is the best possible, will be able to communicate with the government ships with more distinctness than from the northwest coast of Ireland to the Caribbean Sea. It is expected that the new station will be the best on the Atlantic coast, will be complete within five months.

FOUR DEMOCRATS SEEK CURLEY'S SEAT

Four candidates for the seat in the Senate occupied by Senator John F. Curley have appeared since the latter will not be a candidate for reelection. Those who have taken the field for the Democratic nomination are Robert P. Clarkson of Ward 21, John J. Cummings of Ward 9, Russell and Edward T. Burns of Ward 20. Ex-Alderman Fred Bushi will be the Republican candidate.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; STOCKS HAVE FEVERISH TONE

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—After opening strong, with many issues showing gains and with Union Pacific the feature because of its gain of one point and great activity, pressure was suddenly exerted upon the stock market to-day and at the end of fifteen minutes' trading prices had declined and the tone had become feverish and irregular.

Among the gains in the list of active were Steel, 1/4; American Locomotive, 5/8; Reading, 3/4; Reading 2d pref., 1/2; Erie Common, 3/4; Canadian Pacific, 1/4, and Southern Pacific, 1/4. Buying orders poured over the tape from all sections in anticipation of a strong tone after the opening but the profit taking following the rise was so severe that prices gave way 1 to 2 points. The weakest feature of the list sold up nearly a full point before the decline. Union Pacific, however, failed to keep up to its top, the absence of trading in the subsidiary issues also contributing to the feeling. The market opened quiet and a shade lower.

PROCLAIM LE CONTE HAITI'S PRESIDENT

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Aug. 7.—The first division of the revolutionary army entered the capital to-day and immediately proclaimed Leon Le Conte, Haiti's chief executive. Le Conte's election to the presidency especially pleased the Americans also. President Le Conte to-day received the permit General Vilmin, his rival, to land.

ABSTAINERS IN BIG CONVENTION

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 7.—Delegates from all parts of the United States, representing subordinate unions and societies of the National Catholic Abstinence Union, are arriving here for the fortyfirst annual convention of that organization which convenes Tuesday for a four days' session. Many of the delegates are clergymen.

Among the Boston delegates due to arrive to-night are the Rev. Maurice J. O'Connor, chaplain-general of the Boston Union; John T. Sloss, president; Mrs. Catherine Tilson, second vice-president; Maurice Dinneen, financial secretary; Miss Annie Burbyne, Miss Louise M. Hurley of Malden, Edwin Mulready, Probation Commissioner of Massachusetts; Mrs. Alfredy Angelico A. Bragi, Christopher J. Daly, Miss Mary Cronin, John L. Hendley, Fitzgerald, Miss Annie C. Graves of Roxbury, Miss Mary Cronin, John L. Hannon, John E. Gargan, George Sullivan, James Hayes, Timothy Sullivan, E. Flannery, Miss May Shea, Miss Nora Reagan, Miss Julia Nichols, Miss Nellie Mullen, Miss Mary Conners, Miss Anna Burns, Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, Mrs. John J. Adams, James D. Farrell, Miss Mary F. O'Connell and Thomas Hall.

Reception to Delegates.

A reception will be tendered the delegates to-night by the local societies. To-morrow morning the delegates will be given an entertainment at the Hotel Casey. The officials of the organization have made the hotel their headquarters.

The Most Rev. Dennis Fatconio, apostolic delegate, officiated at the Pontifical High Mass Wednesday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral. A session of the convention will be held in the Court House. The Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, C. S. P., LL. D., of New York, and Bishop Hoban will preside. The Boston Union will be represented on the committee which he will appoint following addresses by the State and city officials.

The afternoon session will be given over to reports of the officers and the committees. A number of suggestions having been made by the delegates will be made by National Secretary Shea. Several of the Boston delegates will oppose one or two of them, having been so instructed by their societies.

20,000 in Parade.

The dominant feature of the convention, aside from the sessions of the convention, will be the monster parade to be held Thursday afternoon in which more than 20,000 persons will take part. The famous Wilkes-Barre C. T. A. Regiment, Colonel William F. Murphy commanding, will lead the line, following the parade the regiment will board cars for Nanticoke for a week's encampment at Castle Island.

The local societies have prepared an excellent program for the entertainment of the delegates, including an outing at Moosic Lake. Visits will be given every to sightseeing about the city and a visit to the coal mines.

MEXICAN REVOLT IS STILL GROWING

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—Francisco I. Madero, leader of the insurgents with the government against officers of his former army, who have joined a cabal has abandoned Puebla with a large number of troops from the loyal Maderist army and a rebels is rapidly approaching. Dispatches are passing between rebel leaders in the South and the North and some of the southern states by emissaries of the 104 leaders who revolted, and for whom warrants were issued. The capital is being garrisoned heavily and preparations are being made to protect all the approaches to the city against student assault.

MILWAUKEE-NEW YORK FLIGHT FOR ATWOOD

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, will undertake a non-stop flight from Boston to Washington, announced to-day the details of a proposed flight from Milwaukee to New York, which flight, weather conditions being favorable, will start next Saturday afternoon in the Wisconsin city. The route will be made for a prize of $10,000 offered by Victor J. Evans of Washington, a representative of whose will be present to-morrow to receive the passage. First the money had been deposited in Washington and that Mr. Evans hoped that will be paid out of the bank it would be for presentation purposes only. The flight will be a cross-country flight in the history of aviation.

SOCIALISTS PUT UP A STATE TICKET

WORCESTER, Aug. 7.—James F. Carey of Haverhill heads the State ticket nominated by the Socialists at the close of the business of their annual conference. The balance of the ticket nominated is as follows:

Lieutenant-Governor, Walter S. Hutchins, Greenfield; Secretary of State, Mrs. Rose Fenner, Worcester; Treasurer, James D. Ryan, Fitchburg; Attorney-General, McBride, Watertown; Attorney-General, George E. Roewer, Jr., Boston.

QUINCY TAX RATE IS FIXED AT $19.50

Residents of Quincy were to-day informed by the Board of Assessors of that city that the tax rate for 1911 will be $19.50 on real estate assessed for $1,000. This is a decrease of fifty cents from last year. The total valuation of real estate in the city is $26,408,375, an increase of $1,471,-625. The personal estate is $1,530,400 an increase of $91,345.

BOSTON WOMAN HURT IN AUTO CRASH

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Mrs. Andrew Sommerville of Boston was painfully injured, sustaining a fractured left arm, broken ribs and a dislocated shoulder blade, while out automobiling with her husband. The accident occurred at the foot of Thorpe hill and the machine was a total wreck. Mr. Sommerville was unhurt.

STARVATION EXPERT SEEKS $10,000 BAIL

TACOMA, Aug. 7.—Dr. Linda Hazzard, starvation cure specialist, under arrest for the alleged starvation of Claire Williamson, the London heiress, because she will not serve certain fees of $4,000 which she says were agreed upon, was released on bail for her release. She blames the officers for arresting her, and declares she is a victim to the jealousy of the medical profession.

WILLARD COMING FOR BOSTON FLYING MEET

Charles Foster Willard to-day left Toronto, Canada, for New York, to prepare for the Boston aviation meet August 26 to September 4, inclusive. Willard and J. A. D. Macready have been flying their own type of biplane in Canada. Willard is a Boston boy.

Notes for Investors

London and Liverpool Exchanges are closed to-day.

$ $ $

It is no time to consider intrinsic values for a reign of terror has prevailed in financial markets for several days. Intrinsically there probably all stocks are worth what they are selling for, and some are bargains. But nobody is willing to pick up even a bargain if he feels he will be shoe in the end.

$ $ $

The country is rich and the crops, although prospects are sufficient to insure enough business to maintain earnings of railroads and other corporations of the country at the normal. There has been no wild speculation in stocks or bonds. Securities have been widely distributed in the hands of real owners than ever before in America.

$ $ $

Although the outlook is chaotic at the moment, the investor must not lose sight of the fact that only a few millionaires are involved in the disputes now in progress and that the great industries are organized in corporation form. However much the supposed financial magic of the initials attacks being made upon them, the owners will withdraw from the country in short order to themselves, and they will stay there. Also, it is not likely that in some law will replace the Sherman Anti-Trust law under which the U. S. Steel case is now being brought. The great steel corporation will not be prosecuted by law from the ordinary politician who objects to the rule of reason.

$ $ $

Prices of securities are no higher than they ought to be on the basis of present earnings. It cannot be said that they are discounted a boom and that prices are being readjusted now to correct such a mistake of judgment. The persons who are selling securities have no such ideas in their minds. It is a market of disgust. The big people are saying that if the country wants to unsettle business by applauding the antics of politicians who are going to send ex-senator Bates from one end to other, the public will have to bear the burden, for the public always does pay the cost of excitement in the "Street."

$ $ $

At times one is almost convinced that the newspapers are responsible for the business depression in this country at a period when unparalleled material wealth are enjoying great prosperity. But this is only another misunderstanding. The newspapers simply reflect the public, and if they attack unmerited managers in the sections of the "newly virtuous" politicians it is only because the public wants to. If it did not the politicians would be powerless. Congress passes laws and some of them are enforced, but the newspaper heading rules the country.

$ $ $

Crops are proving a bitter disappointment, and the market is discounting a bad report from the government next Wednesday.

Although there are large acreages of all grains this year 6,000,000 greater than last year, the most conservative estimate places the crop 500,000,000 bushels under that of 1910. There are 6,000,000 more people to be fed, at least 120,000,000 bushels, so that there is a shrinkage of 620,000,000 bushels from the normal. Here are the figures:

	Actual, 1911.	Estimated, 1910.
Wheat	665,000,000	675,000,000
Corn	2,125,000,000	2,900,000,000
Oats	1,126,000,000	1,400,000,000
Barley	175,000,000	140,000,000
	3,121,000,000	4,415,000,000
Deficit		706,000,000

This is one of the most conservative estimates, for some make the deficit 800,000,000 more. Besides, hay is 10,000,000 tons short, and there are 50,000,000 bushels less of potatoes.

This will mean higher prices for food. Export of a record cotton crop at low prices will mean a smaller foreign trade balance. None of these things is an argument for higher prices in stocks.

BOSTON AMERICAN FLAG COUPON

DOORS OF OPPORTUNITY STILL WIDE OPEN

In Great

$10,000 Proverb Contest

SOLVE TODAY'S PICTURE

Then Send for Any Back Picture You May Need

This Is Picture No. 50

The 50th puzzle picture shows the Boston American's Great $10,000 Proverb Contest to be two-thirds completed.

But it also shows that the end is more than near—time for new contestants to enter and be right up with the earlier starters solving a few days. There are twenty-five puzzle pictures published in the contest, then, after that, there will be a period of two weeks or more for delays before it is necessary to have the list of solutions delivered to the Contest Department.

This contest is so arranged that any one can obtain the back numbers of the puzzle pictures without the least trouble. Any number may be ordered by mail or even by 'phone at the Contest Department, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street.

The back numbers are published in the regular rates of the Daily and Sunday Boston American. For instance, a Sunday back number and one contest answer (Sunday's Sunday back numbers are five cents (plus return postage). You may get as many or few as you wish.

No answers are to be submitted until after the last picture in the contest has appeared in the paper. Then you will readily see that the time of your entering can have not the slightest effect on the awarding of the prizes.

Is not this GREAT CONTEST NOW!

Is not every reader of this paper interested in contest of this character?

There is no reason to be about entering. You do not even have to send your name. You are a contestant just as soon as you begin to solve the puzzle pictures.

Many people would rather enter late than early, but, of course, you cannot enter after the P. C.

To enter now will cut the period of suspense by two-thirds. You won't have to wait nearly as long for a decision on the merits of your answers as those who started earlier.

Should remember, you can always get copies of the official American Proverb Book, which is such a help to contestants in arriving at quick and accurate solutions of the puzzle pictures.

This Proverb Book has been imitated by some unscrupulous and absolutely unauthorized dealers, so you must be sure and get the Boston American's Proverb Book.

It contains all the pictures that will be represented by the puzzle pictures during the contest. Copies may be had from the Contest Department, either by mail or calling there for them.

The price of the Proverb Book is 25 cents. If you want it sent by mail send only enough money to cover postage.

Enter this battle of wits to-day—that is, begin to solve the puzzle pictures. It may be the means of winning for you a $2,000 Seashore home, or a 1912 Automobile, or a Motor Boat, or a Piano, or any one of the other prizes which go to make up the 1,000 prizes offered.

Give the contest your undivided attention, and at the end of the time you will be convinced that the mental recreation is both good and pleasant for you. Send for the back numbers of the puzzle pictures that you need.

It is not necessary to send the pictures.

Use the coupon below for the answer blank, while desirable, is not necessary.

Be sure and have the number of these pictures on the answer blanks should you choose to send home-made blanks.

This is the means of identification. You should you make your own answer blanks. Follow the form of the printed blanks as closely as possible.

$10,000 worth of prizes will be distributed to happy Boston American Proverb Contestants.

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No answers will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture.

Why Not Be ONE of the Fortunate Prize Winners?

CONDITIONS OF CONTEST

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be awarded absolutely as per the Boston American's list of winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to as many complete sets of answers.

Written answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Personal participation in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one set of answers. Each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set must be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employees of the American and their families are strictly barred from participation in this contest.

In the event there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to those securing the greatest number of correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exactness of the solutions submitted. In case of a tie, each of the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Should any one desire to enter more than one set of answers, they can send them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the list of pictures is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand as being a chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or by messenger before the closing time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the loss of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

Should contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest, and the solutions of these pictures may be sent on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupons is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the Proverb Contest reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

E. H. R. GREEN DODGES CUPID

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Colonel E. H. R. Green, the giant son of Hetty Green, and one of the two heirs to her almost countless wealth, is once again on the firing line for the interviewers because he let slip a remark that he would be forty-three years old on August 22 and within twelve months of just old enough to make good on the marriage proposition.

"And I expect to make good," he is reported to have said to a friend.

"What is the date of the wedding, colonel?" a reporter asked him to-day at the Waldorf.

"I only wish I was going to be married to-day," he said, heaving a gentle sigh. "If I could get married to-day I would, if only to please the newspapers."

The colonel gave his breakfast order to a waiter.

Willing to Be "Monkey."

"Say," he said to his interviewer, "on a dull Monday you chaps generally go to the zoological gardens and get stories, don't you? Well, anyhow, I guess I make a pretty good monkey. Just sail in and ask me questions."

"You said you would marry within the year," queried the reporter.

"That is twelve months off, and if I keep it within twelve months ahead I reckon I'll be pretty safe," he replied. "What's the use of any more little affairs beyond the inner faces of the valve caps. In any case, adjustments should be made in the carbureting and ignition systems—further opening the throw of oil or fuel will be obviated.

• A fine gauze screen should always be fitted over the mouth of the horn bell, and this more particularly if the horn is of the "all metal" variety. It will be found that the screen will not appreciably reduce the volume of the sound, but that, on the other hand, it will prove useful in tending to deaden the life of the sounding-ring parts of the horn. Almost all weaknesses of the sound in a horn of this type are due to dirt or dust that has found lodgement under the reed, thus preventing entirely or in part its necessary vibrations. This is what causes them to "choke" or speak in a muffled way. The screen, if it is fine enough, will prevent this dust entering the horn, since of course, the air that fills the bell will be expelled through the reed to cause the sound, must first pass the reed before it can enter the bell. If the reed becomes clogged in this way the only remedy is that the trouble can be most effectively remedied by passing a slip of thin paper under it. On no account should the reed be removed for cleaning by inserting of a screwdriver or knife, since this will affect the set of the horn and perhaps make it hoarse and erratic.

It is almost a universal practice among machinists to use cotton waste to cleanse their hands of oil. The waste is more or less expensive for the reasons that the waste is not used a second time, and that the oil is thrown away as a result. Instead of oil, absorbed from the men's hands, goes to waste.

In a plant of the size of that of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, and employing some four thousand men, the cost of waste and the oil so discarded is enough to a considerable figure in the course of a year. To avoid this unnecessary expense the Cadillac Company, two years ago, inaugurated a system which, from a scientific management, it began to supply towels instead of waste to its employes, and installed a small laundry plant to cleanse them.

The installation of these innovations led to a thorough investigation by experts. It was the fact that the oil in the towels could be recovered—further opening the economy, seemingly small but well worth considering when reckoned by a year instead of a day.

SLIGO MEN NAME SET OF OFFICERS

At the sixteenth annual election of officers of the Sligo Social Club in National Hall, South Boston, the following were chosen: William J. Healy, president; Frank M. Tiernan, vice-president; Joun O'Gara, treasurer; Roger Kinanet, recording secretary; Patrick K. O'Lally, corresponding secretary; Thomas Tondra, assistant secretary; Thomas Tondra, assistant sergeant-at-arms. The trustees are George Harper and Michael J. Quenan. Patrick Gorman was elected librarian for the sixteenth term.

RATE BATTLE BEGUN BY MONON RAILROAD

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7.—The Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Railroad, known as the "Monon route," and the Big Four Railroad will start a war for passenger business between Indianapolis and Chicago August 27. The Monon has had traffic arrangements with the Big Four and other roads between Indianapolis and Chicago, but has declined to renew these, announcing a train to take effect August 27 as "Monon Special" between Indianapolis and Chicago in competition.

BRITISH CRUISER CORNWALL AFLOAT

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 7.—The British cruiser Cornwall, with 1,500 men on board, which went on the rocks yesterday off Southwestern ledges, Sable Bay, was refloated to-day and put into Clarke's Harbor. There she took the disabled Canadian cruiser Niobe in tow. The damage to the Cornwall was found to be slight.

$2,000 TROPHY ROAD RECORD

By J. C. KERRISON.

The offer of a $2,000 trophy to be perpetual and representing the American road record in average miles per hour may result in a race being held over Long Island roads. The present record is 73.29 miles an hour made by Tetzlaff in a Lozier in Santa Monica, if, at the end of three months this record is not bettered in such road races as the Vanderbilt, Grand Prize and the Elgin, the trophy will go to Tetzlaff. It is expected that a course will be found on Long Island suitable for a contest, and Riverhead seems to be the logical course. The residents at Southampton are heartily in favor of the project. It is said that Hicksville, De Kalb, Bruce-Brown, Belcher and Tetzlaff have declared that they would compete in such a contest.

If the sparking plugs are very prone to foul with oil and soot it is a good plan to investigate with a view to noting whether or not they are projecting too far into the combustion chambers, particularly if they are located in either one of the sides of the valve pockets. If they are screwed into the valve port caps, the removal of the caps will be the quickest of all the best way to determine this condition. The points or the outer end of the shell should extend not very little, if any, beyond the inner faces of the valve caps. In any case, adjustments should be made in the carbureting and ignition systems—further opening the throw of oil or fuel will be obviated.

NEWSBOYS GIVE CUP TO STARKEY

Last night at the Quincy House, a banquet was tendered to Harry L. Starkey, former circulation manager of the AMERICAN, and now in the same capacity with the Chicago American. As it would be impossible to accommodate all the newsboys in Boston at one time, and at the same time, a committee of twenty was appointed to attend, there was also a delegation present from the circulation department of the AMERICAN.

A. Rubinovitz, known as "Happy," presented Mr. Starkey with a beautiful loving cup, the gift of the Boston Newsboys. Mr. Starkey was born in East Boston, he began work as a newsboy in Chicago later on going into the mailing room of the Chicago American, from which he went on the editorial office as a reporting representative. After a few years of this he was called back to the circulation office as an assistant to the circulation manager. In February, 1909, Mr. Starkey came to Boston as circulation manager of the AMERICAN and made for this city under many friends among the newsboys and newspaper men.

BAD FREIGHT WRECK NEAR WINSTED, CT.

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 7.—One of the worst freight wrecks on the Central New England Railroad in years occurred a mile west of here at 5:10 a. m. to-day when two freight cars, nine of them loaded of coal-bound freight, No. 34, from Maybrook to New York, were derailed. Three of the cars were thrown down a twenty-foot fill into Mad River and the others were telescoped into three or four car lengths. The tracks were obliterated, the bolts being torn from the ties and badly twisted and thrown in every direction.

WESTERN FREIGHT ADVANCE SUSPENDED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Proposed advances in freight rates by railroads in the West and Middle West effective October 28, were to-day ordered suspended until December 28, 1911, by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

PLAN STRIKE AS ANTI-WAR PROTEST

MADRID, Aug. 7.—An international meeting arranged by the labor federations of Spain and France in protest against the Franco-Spanish military operations in Morocco was held here to-day. There was no disorder. The French delegates asked the Spaniards to consolidate with France in a general strike against war. They declared the French proletariat would oppose war by a general strike and the destruction of property.

PRESIDENT GOES TO MOUNTAIN LAKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Taft, accompanied by Major Archibald W. Butt, his aide, and two secret service men, left here at 8 a. m. over the Baltimore & Ohio for Mountain Lake Park, Md., where the President will address a Chautauqua meeting this evening.

In All the News of Many Days This Is the Gayest, Most Cheering Piece of Bathos

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

The universe should be grateful to the society reporter who concocted what follows concerning the announcement that Colonel Astor has been persuaded to acknowledge his engagement to a young woman. Here is the gem of purest repertorial ray serene. Believe, dear reader, that we quote literally:

"Vincent Astor, the nineteen-year-old son of Colonel Astor, would not discuss his father's engagement, but it is evident that he is elated at the possibility of the acquisition of a new mamma."

Considering that Vincent Astor, nineteen years old, has a "mamma" living, though divorced, this is charming.

Much happiness and much elation may be in store for the young man. For if he acquires with delight one new "mamma" one year after papa's first divorce, why may he not look forward to getting a dozen more while still in his young and glorious manhood! Who says this is not a land of opportunity!

Mission Money for Albanian Christians

A correspondent of the AMERICAN offers the pregnant suggestion that Christian civilization would make more headway in Albania and other Turkish provinces if the immense sums of Christian mission money that are now being devoted to the conversion of the Turks were devoted instead to the strengthening of the Christianity that is already established on Turkish soil. He says it would be BETTER TO SAVE THE MARTYRS THAN TO SERMONIZE THEIR MURDERERS.

Regarding our actual Christianity in a broad sense as a comparatively humane and efficient type of civilization, it should indeed be plain that the best way to propagate it in the Turkish Empire is to give the Christian communities that exist there a chance to develop the strenth and dignity of Christian social types.

If a single town in Albania could, by the concentrated economic and moral support of the Christian world, be made to exhibit high qualities of Western civilization—good roads, free schools and a free press, legal equality and industrial efficiency—that town would be "a city set upon a hill." Its light and energy would penetrate every quarter of the Mohammedan dominions.

If Christianity is in its nature a social conception—a right and noble way of ordering communities—it is impossible to propagate it on a merely individualistic basis.

This principle is borne out by a study of the successes and failures of modern missions. And it was clearly expressed in the missionary enterprises of the early Christian ages, which spent their force in winning, not an individual here and there, but city after city and nation after nation.

In the present deplorable and tragic state of the Christians of Albania they need the economic support of the Christian world. They need money.

Thousands of these people are houseless, naked, hungry.

It is well that diplomacy and the threat of foreign intervention should leash and cow the cruelty of the Turks. That is well, but it is not enough.

The Albanians should have money—not merely a dole of alms to tide over the appalling crisis, but such steady economic support as will enable them to rebuild the waste places.

And after that is done they should continue to have financial backing from those in Europe and America who profess to care for the advancement of Christian civilization.

THE TURKS WOULD NEVER HAVE BAYONETTED THE BABIES OR RAVISHED THE WOMEN OF ALBANIA IF THE FINANCES OF NEW YORK AND LONDON HAD, IN ANY CONSIDERABLE MEASURE, BEEN INVESTED IN THAT NEGLECTED CHRISTIAN COUNTRY.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE REVENGES OF HISTORY.

Editor AMERICAN:

Just as the chain is as strong as its weakest link, so government in Europe is as strong as the Turkish force, for it receives the hearty approval of all the great Powers. The assassins of the Christians in Eastern Europe are not the Mohammedans, but Christian England and Christian France (it was Christian), who fought side by side with the unspeakable Turk against Christian Russia in 1854 to perpetuate and save this monstrosity.

In one way the retribution on the Eastern Christians is just, for when the Crusaders came to save the Holy Land from the infidel they were either indifferent or actually hostile. So, in the same way, when retribution overtakes England and France, it will be just. I suppose the state of affairs in Europe can only be compared to the apathy of this nation to the frightful curse of slavery after all other civilized nations had wiped it out—and when a price we paid. So will Europe pay a heavy price.

There is a prophecy in the Book of Daniel which many Christians regard as relating to this event. It is found in the seventh chapter, where it describes the "King of the North" as rescuing the "pleasant land" out of the hand of its oppressor. Russia has always been regarded as the King of the North.

I have proposed the formation of a "Holy Catholic League" to urge Russia to fulfil her destiny. I don't mean Roman Catholics exclusively, for I am a Dutch Reformed Catholic myself, but we all believe in the Holy Catholic Church, the communion of saints, etc., etc. This means Roman Catholics, Greek Catholics and every one in Christendom.

GAS COLLECTOR COMPLAINS.

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I saw the article in your paper about destroying dogs and cats, and I think it was a very good one. I have been a collector for a gas company and have had a great deal of trouble with these pests, especially dogs. When I go in some of the houses a kin re-ds, the face of the dog, and sometimes I am afraid to go in. The people wonder why I don't get a gas bill every month. I think if you tried in some way to get rid of these dangerous pests you would do a great thing for the public.

MARTYRS OR MURDERERS?

Editor AMERICAN.

In view of events now transpiring in Albania, does not our present system of missionary work seem inconsistent?

Our fellow Christians are being massacred with all the barbaric cruelty of prehistoric times, and by those whom the missionaries have been trying for years to convert.

American shekels are rolling into the church coffers to perpetuate work of this kind, while those for whom the work is intended are murdering right and left the kin of those who give.

Does this not seem ludicrous, inane? Since this money and efforts are wasted, why not devote it to relieving these martyrs of Christendom? Here we are dying inert, inanimate, so far as helping them is concerned, doing absolutely nothing to quell the brutality of their persecutors, while we spend years of toil and millions of money in trying to enlighten these same infidels. Is there not at least a portion of these vast sums that can be utilized for the relief of the offenders? Is it fair, or just, or humane, that these Albanian Christians, working consistently and tirelessly for the advancement of Christianity, should be made to bear the brunt of all the Mohammedans' prejudice and racial ire against Christians in general?

Why, if we will give so readily to the heathens' uplifting, will we remain deaf to the Christians' cry of agony?

I say stop the overflow of money right now that is intended for the persecutors and rather spend it to free from political and religious bondage those who are giving their very life blood for Christianity.

ONCE AGAIN, I AM A CROSS CRABBED COLD OLD COVE, BUT BELIEVE ME, IN MY HEART THE FIRE OF LOVE FOR YOU IS BURNING FIERCELY!
I FEEL AT THIS MOMENT THAT THE CONFLAGRATION MAY LEAP TO MY FEVERISH BRAIN AND CONSUME ME IN ITS SEETHING FLAMES!
AUTOMATIC CALL NUMBER TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY THREE JUMP IN AN' MAN IN STREET!
I DO NOT SEE ANY SMOKE!
NEITHER DO WE!
PUT A LID OVER UP TO THE 10TH FLOOR!
IT'S IN ROOM IF-TY IVE!
WE WILL TAKE NO CHANCES! LET 'EM START PUMPING!
SEND SOME WATER UP HERE QUICK! LET HER COME BOYS!
AND AS I SIT HERE TONIGHT WRITING YOU, I CRAVE THAT YOU WILL TRY TO EXTINGUISH THE FLAMES OF LOVE THAT ARE ASLEEP AGAIN! EH? NO WONDER YOU DID NOT ANSWER MY CALL! HERE MAIL THIS LETTER!
I DIDN'T MEAN TO FALL A-SLEEP SIR!

NO MORE FUNNY BUSINESS NOW FERD. WE'LL TAKE TURNS RIDING IN THE FRONT SEAT WITH THE PRETTY HEIRESS HEADS? HA-HA!
WELL, I'LL SIT WITH HER COMING BACK ANYHOW.
1
WONDER IF OUR CHARMING LITTLE FRIEND LIKES VIOLETS?
I'LL BET THE OLD LADY A BOY OF CANDY. NOTHING LIKE KEEPING ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF HER.
2
WOULD YOU BOYS CARE TO COME TO OUR GARDEN PARTY?
AWFULLY KIND OF YOU TO INVITE US MISS MILLIONBUCKS, BUT WE'RE TAKING A FRIEND OF OURS OUT FOR AN AUTOMOBILE RIDE - HER FATHER OWNS LEAD MINES OUT IN ARIZONA AND IS WORTH MILLIONS.
MAY IN HAND. ALL THE SWELLS DO IT.
3
HELLO HALL-ROOM-DO YOU WANT TO COME COACHING WITH US? SWELL DINNER AT CHERRYS WHEN WE GET BACK.
SORRY OLD WHATAWAD, BUT WE'RE TAKING A FRIEND OF OURS - A REAL HEIRESS - OUT IN OUR CAR
SHE'S ONE PIPPIN TOO.
4
THE LADIES WILL BE RIGHT DOWN.
FUNNY HOW THINGS COME IN BUNCHES. BOTH MISS MILLIONBUCKS AND OLD WHATAWAD INVITED US TO SWELL AFFAIRS. BUT WOULD I PASS UP ANYTHING LIKE THIS? NIX!
SHE COMES.
5
TOO BAD YOU SLOPPED UP ON THAT GARDEN PARTY AND THE EATS FERD.
OH BOYS, MR. LONGGREEN OF PITTSBURG, IS TAKING ME OUT IN HIS MACHINE TO-DAY, AND TO THINK HIS CAR WON IN THE VANDERBILT CUP RACES.
WHAT? WITH THAT?
MOTHER WENT TO GO WITH YOU THOUGH.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

INTELLECTUAL ASCENDENCY OF WOMEN

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

IF the young men of our times do not look to their ways the young women are going to secure an intellectual supremacy over them that will create a contrast between the two sexes that will be quite to the disadvantage of the male.

This will operate to discourage marriage between people of the same social position, or if the marriage relation be consummated, it will have to subsist with an intellectual inequality between the contracting parties that will imperil the harmony and felicity of their united life.

While it is said to be the case that there is an increase in the number of men having in view a business life who nevertheless pursue a college course, yet, relatively speaking, the number of business men who are college-educated is small; competition is so fierce that the average man plunges into business at the first opportunity and, once in, the only opportunity thenceforth afforded him for mental discipline is what he gains by the struggle of life.

Perhaps that statement ought to be qualified by recognizing the fact that there is a kind of intellectual discipline exercised by the public press and of which men of every station and occupation are able to avail.

But while a newspaper is capable of becoming a means of mental training, it is doubtful whether, in the way in which it is hurriedly, superficially and thoughtlessly read—glancing at the headlines and skipping or, at any rate, skimming the editorials—much in the shape of solid instruction and intellectual upbuilding is actually secured.

Journalism is probably less educational since the tremendous increase in quantity and volume of its output than when newspapers were fewer in number and more compact in contents.

The very quantity of the reading matter operates to diminish our appreciation of its value, and because we prize it less highly we peruse it less carefully.

That, then, is the case with the man. With the women, it is quite otherwise, at least if she be a member of the middle or upper middle class of society and not the slave of oppressive circumstances.

There is at present, on the part of her sex, a tremendous passion for intellectual discipline and refinement.

The movement in this direction is one of the phenomena of the last quarter of a century. The multiplication of female colleges is magical. So is the organization of female clubs having for their object the study of art, literature, science and economics.

Young women, in large numbers, are going abroad to avail of the opportunities of foreign travel and study. The sex is, in that respect, coming to its own.

The female mind is becoming broader, stronger and more adfluent in its intimacies and sympathies, while the male mind, on the contrary, as we have seen, is bent nearly double under the lash of business competition and is allowing itself to become controlled to the groove of its single pursuit and dried by the monotonous materialism of that pursuit.

The man, therefore, must look to his steps or his wife will become indeed his "better half," not only as matter of compliment, but as matter of fact, and he be "the weaker vessel."

The South to the North

A Reciprocity Poem

By CHESTER FIRKINS

THE South Sea hailed the North Sea,
The gulf spake to the bay;
"I give you greeting, brother,
For we be kin to-day.
The word of my mighty people
Has gone in friendship forth;
And we wait for your sons to answer
The call of the South to the North."

The Southland hailed the Northland:
"My men are of your breed;
They have hewn from the wilds a nation
By the strength of hands that bleed.
They built as your sons are building;
And the work of their arms endures.
They have given their hands in friendship,
And they wait the clasp of you s."

The South wind hailed the North wind:
"We lived when the land was born,
We know no clan nor border;
We know no fear nor scorn.
Ye have bred your sons to glory,
And so have I bred mine.
They have proffered the pact of honor.
And they wait for the friendly sign."

He Writes About Going Fishing

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA & Ma & me went to Nantasket. We went fishing. Pa did all of the fishing, because Ma and me went fishing once beefore with Pa, & Ma sed she wud never go out in a bote eggeein with Pa. Ma always sed that any man that cud reck a sidewalk on the way hoam wud be sure to rock a bote.

So wen we got down to Rockport Pa met a frend of his named Brinkley & a other frend named Joseph Karl. Mister Karl was a policeeman, & he was having a day off with his frend & wanted Pa to go out. We are going to catch some weak fish, Mister Karl sed.

I dount see how you can, sed Ma. To-day is Sunday & you cant catch weak fish on Sundays any more than you cud catch sunfish on week days. His Ma, said all three of the men, that is a very good jest, so it is.

Then they all started off for the bote & Mister Karl sed loud enuf for Ma & me to heer, Yure wife is a very clever woman, Pa, Hi.

Bobbie, sed ma, wile we was setting on the porch waiting for the fishermen to com back, Bobbie, wen you grow up & get married, I want you to remember one (1) thing. I want you to reemember that a married man & his mate dount get by with one tenth of the wool that they think they are pulling over the eyes of there wife. For instans, sed Ma, did you notis how loud Mister Karl sed That is a very clever wife you have? You see, sed Ma, he wuddent have sed it so loud only he wanted to hand me a littel of the good ei salve. Salve is the whole thing in married life, Bobbie, Ma sed, it is like politeness oiling the wheels of society, it maiks the wheels of conversation run easy.

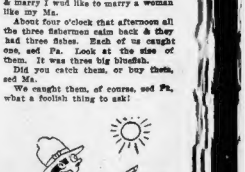
If I had been a stern wife, Bobbie, wich I am not, sed Ma, I wud have got rite up after Mister Karl handed me that salve & I wud have strolled down to the boat with them & locked them in the locker. But the years have taught me to be kind & gentel to yure arring Pa, she sed, so I let him go along with his frends to have thare good time. I dount think they will catch many fish, but you & I have a nice pleasant place to set here & a chanst to go in swimming & plenty of munny for ice cream & the musick & the moving picter show, so wen they git back with thare sunburn & other tan on thare manly cheeks, we will be nice & cool & everybody will be happy.

When Ma was talking I cuddent help thinking that if I ever grow up & marry I wud like to marry a woman like my Ma.

About four o'clock that afternoon all the three fishermen calm back & they had three fishes. Each of us caught one, sed Pa. Look at the size of them. It was three big bluefish.

Did you catch them, or buy them, sed Ma.

We caught them, of course, sed Pa, what a foolish thing to ask!



Jest then a little boy calm up to Pa & sed Hey, Mister, I bet I can beet a dollar that you gave me for my three blue-fish. See, wen I drop it on the sand it doesnt ring.

It cant miss on the sand, sed Pa, gitting kind of red in the face. You must drop it on wood.

There isent any porch here, sed Ma, larfin, why doant you drop it on my husband's hed, that will do. So the boy got a other dollar from Mister Karl, a paper dollar, & we all had dinner.

Then Mister Karl got up & sed My good frends, I am glad to be here. Then he durned to Pa & sed,

That is a very clever wife you've got!
